In the English Cup competition to-day Aston Villa were beaten at home by Huddersfield, whilst West Ham went down to the Arsenal. Hamilton Academicals sprung a surprise by beating St. Mirren in the Scottish Cup tie at Paisley. Dundee drew with the Hearts, whilst Partick Thistle and Rangers had easy wins over Falkirk and Montrose, respectively. Full Cup tie and League match scores are appended:—

FENG AND YEN COMBINE
Heavy Fighting Reported on the Shantung Border
Peking, Last Night.
Taiyuanfu, the capital of Shansi, is now the centre of anti-Nanking activities. Feng Yu-hsiang, since his arrival there, has been frequently in conference with Yen Hsi-shan. Perhaps their military headquarters will be established there to direct operations. But a number of Kuomintang and Shansi leaders are urging that a "Provincial Central Government" should be established at Peking with Yen and Feng as Commander-in-Chief and Vice-Commander-in-Chief respectively.

DEL MARU PIRACY
The criminal case arising out of the piracy on board the Japanese steamship Del Maru, in September, was concluded before Mr. A. W. G. H. Grantham at the Central Magistracy yesterday, when he decided to commit the two accused for trial at the next Criminal Sessions on the following charges:—
Lo Ming and Chan Chung-nam, charged with consulting, confederating and corresponding with pirates for the ransom of Hsu Han-hi, a Chinese engineer of Shanghai, who was captured by pirates.
Lo Ming alone, charged with threatening Cheung King-yuet and Liu Chow-yan to injure the person of Hsu in order to cause them to pay the sum of $11,000.
Lo Ming and Chan Chung-nam, charged with conspiracy, with others unknown, to illegally obtain from Cheung King-yuet and Liu Chow-yan the sum of $11,000.

DEL MARU PIRACY
Before his Worship gave his decision, Mr. A. Covey, of Messrs. G. K. Hall Brutton and Co., made a lengthy speech for the defence.
Piracy Proved
He said that a piracy on the high seas aboard the Del Maru had been proved, as well as the shooting and the robbery at sea, in fact, all except who the pirates were.
Following the piracy, they had heard of the kidnapping by pirates of certain people, particularly the man Hsu, and, naturally, Hsu's relatives and friends were anxious to get him released.

DEL MARU PIRACY
In this connection it was a curious thing that not once in the six days that the case had been heard had there been any evidence to show how the information of Hsu's capture had come to the knowledge of the first Crown witness, Cheung King-yuet. All that he had said on the subject was: "I was acquainted with the fact that ransom was being asked."
Surmise Not Permitted
Mr. Covey then referred to the arrival of the man Cheung in Hong Kong, accompanied by one Chan Hoi-pu, Cheung registered at the hotel in his own name, whilst Chan registered as Hsu Han-hi, the captured man's name. The explanation was: "That was the name to be used in order to get in touch with them." It was not for him (Mr. Covey) to ask who was meant by "them," and he would remind his Worship that the criminal law did not permit of any surmise, everything had to be proved.

DEL MARU PIRACY
Personally, he had wanted and waited for that proof as to how Cheung had that information. Was it by messenger, was it by letter, or by telegram? If so, who was the messenger, and by whom was the letter or telegram sent?—Certainly not by either of the accused, or, he felt sure, the Police would have brought that evidence in.

The Liberal amendment to the Government's Coal Miners Bill last Thursday, is considering tendering his resignation of the leadership of the Liberal Party. He was yesterday in consultation with the leading members of the party.
On the Liberal amendment to the Coal Miners Bill four Liberal members voted with the Government and against their own party, while eight others abstained from voting either way. The amendment was defeated by only nine votes.
There is great interest shown in the Party meeting to be held on Tuesday, when this matter will be considered.
In any case it appears that the action of those Liberals who took a line opposed to the party decision is bound to have considerable repercussions.—British Wireless Service.

Rugby, Yesterday.
The Liberal organ, the Daily News, says that it has reason to believe that Mr. David Lloyd George, in consequence of the defeat of the Liberal amendment to the Government's Coal Miners Bill last Thursday, is considering tendering his resignation of the leadership of the Liberal Party. He was yesterday in consultation with the leading members of the party.

Serious Allegations Against a Club

The report of the Joint Commission of the London and Essex County Football Associations, to inquire into and deal with matters affecting the Dagenham Town F.C. has been issued.

The Commission had to investigate an allegation that the club had paid to an amateur player, J. Bancroft, two shillings per week for four weeks in excess of his actual expenses, and a further allegation that, in connection with their Cup-tie against Brentford and Watley, gate tickets had been issued for which no return was made to the visiting club.

Two meetings were held, and the Commission, after hearing evidence from the interested parties, issued the following report of their decisions:—

(1) That the statement in writing made by J. Bancroft that he had been paid sums by the Dagenham Town F.C. in excess of his actual expenses was obtained under duress.

(2) That the Commission accepted the player's evidence that the statement was dictated to him by J. G. Read, and is false.

(3) That J. G. Read be not permitted to take part in any football management.

(4) That E. Watkinson be severely censured for failing to report an alleged offence against the Amateur Rules.

(5) That the allegation against the Dagenham Club that tickets were issued for which no account was rendered is "not proven."

(6) The Commission made no order as to expenses.

Football "Benefits"

The directors of Tottenham Hotspur have decided to award benefits to Dimmock, Lindsay, Smith, Forster and Skitt. With the exception of Skitt, all the players have had a previous benefit from the club, and it will be remembered that last season A. Grimadell had his third benefit.

The sum each player will receive has not yet been settled, as it must be approved by the League, and will depend upon the number of appearances they have made in the first team and reserve team respectively. A few years ago seven of the Tottenham players were given a benefit in the same season.

Cup Final Tickets

A decision of the Football Association Council to make a complete change in the arrangements for disposing of tickets for the Cup-final at Wembley Stadium on April 26 has been made known.

Sir Frederick J. Wall, secretary of the F.A., stated that the Association this year will take 75 per cent. of the tickets for Clubs and Associations in membership, which means that no more than 23,000 odd tickets will be available through the Stadium authorities and the ticket agencies.

Instead of sending applications to Wembley Stadium, supporters of Clubs will apply to their local League Clubs, and it is understood that special arrangements will be made to ensure that the needs of followers of the Cup finalists will be satisfactorily met.

Spurs' New Manager

Football finances are painfully low at the moment, and some of the second and third division clubs in the Football League are issuing distress signals and adopting other methods for avoiding the worst at the end of the season.

Tottenham Hotspur, once the idol of the London soccer public, in a glaring example of this. Since their descent to the second division, they have found, that although their expenses are necessarily curtailed slightly, their gate receipts have also been curtailed; but great hopes of a revival are entertained now that a new manager with new ideas, has been introduced.

Confident of Success

The Spurs' new manager is Mr. Percy Smith, who comes from the management of Bury F.C. He was until 1920, a prominent half-back, and his efforts for Blackburn Rovers helped that famous club considerably.

He is most confident that the Spurs will soon be restored to the position they earned for themselves in the hearts of football fans.

"There may not be instant success," he said immediately after his appointment, "but, sooner or later, success must come if the building up is done on the right foundations."

Mr. Smith will not divulge what plan of action he intends to adopt, but he says that he has been watching the club for some time, and he feels sure that he knows where the root of the trouble is and how it can be killed.

Bad Times

Tottenham, however, is not the only club in distress, and certain of the first class Welsh clubs are among the worst affected. Nor does their position improve as the season progresses; indeed, it is getting more serious.

Merthyr Town are complaining almost all the time about the lack of support which is given them. The chairman of the club blames even the business men of the town for their absence of support financially and in other ways.

Newport County, another of the Football League clubs in Wales, are in the same predicament, although they are keeping more quiet and not airing their grievances to all and sundry. Each of these teams is in the third division, and if they sink low enough in the table, it will rest with the F.A. whether they are re-elected to the League.

RUGBY FOOTBALL

At the inquest at Nottingham on Thomas Cecil Barber, the Old Etonian and Notts Rugby player, who was killed as the result of his car crashing into a dray proceeding in the same direction, it was stated there was no rear light on the dray, but a reflector. A verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.

Scotia's Thrilling Recovery

A fuller account of the international Rugby match at Murrayfield between Scotland and Wales has just been received.

After being one point throughout the second half, Scotland snatched a victory in the closing stages when Waddell dropped a brilliant goal.

Wales crossed over leading by 9 points to 8 points, Graham Jones dropping a goal and also scoring a try which Ivor Jones converted, while Simmers got two tries for Scotland, one of which Waters converted.

Scotland were penned in their own area for the first twenty minutes of the game, but actually Simmers' first try was the initial score, obtained during Scotland's first incursion in Welsh territory.

In the second half the Scottish backs indulged in some clever passing and incisive running and they sustained the attack at the start.

Macpherson was brilliant but erratic and spoilt several good movements by weak passing at a critical moment.

The Welsh forwards were baulked on line by Macintosh, who dribbled back to lead a Scots attack.

At this stage Hart and Powell were hurt and were passengers for the rest of the game. Scotland seemed to have shot their bolt, as Wales persistently pressed but they were finally sent back by a penalty taken by Waters.

The Scots then made an heroic rush led by Agnew, which forced Wales to kick over their own line.

From the ensuing scrum, Waddell dropped a great goal two minutes from time. Result:—Scotland:—1 goal, 1 dropped goal, 1 try (12 points). Wales:—1 place goal, 1 drop goal (9 points).

BILLIARDS

Visitors' Good Influence

It is worthy of note, too, that the thousand points break disease is contagious. Not long ago, such an event was very rare in Britain, but to-day, one is disappointed, almost hurt, if none of the players obliges on a particular day.

Clark McConachy, the New Zealand champion has shown on more than one occasion how that feat is done by New Zealanders, while Tom Newman, the former British champion, added his con-

RACING

Sir W. Gillbey On Centralisation

Sir Walter Gillbey, Bart., the well-known racehorse owner, wrote the following letter to the hon. secretary of the Racing Protection Branch of the National Workmen's Constitutional Council respecting the suggested centralisation of racing to big centres:—

"In reply to your letter inviting an expression of my views upon the concentration of racing, the only opinion I have upon the same is that unless the result of the totalisator brings in considerable sums to the funds of various racecourses, especially the smaller ones, it will of necessity compel the amalgamation of some of them through financial causes."

"I believe that some of the racecourses have great difficulty in existing, and it is obvious that it will be some few years before any serious action would be taken as regards concentration of courses to any important extent."

"Of course, should such a proceeding eventuate, manifestly, to my mind, a spot would be chosen in the various districts to meet the convenience of the local population. I think there are possibly too many race meetings during the year which clash with one another."

The Lincoln and National

While no official market has been formed on the Lincolnshire and Grand National, London and provincial layers have been operating on L'Odeon, Slipper and Swift Marten for the Lincolnshire.

The two first-named are French entries. L'Odeon ran thrice last season, but failed to secure a place.

Bookmakers consider Easter Hero to be a prominent favourite for the Grand National, with Sandyhook as second favourite. It is possible at present to place small amounts at ten to one against Easter Hero.

Four Grand National candidates were included in the Burston Double Handicap 'Chase at Lingfield, over three miles, and three of them were placed, Kingsford at 7 to 1 against being first, alike at 4 to 1 against being second and Glancesia at 3 to 1 against being third. The other Grand National horse, Lordi, was favourite at 11 to 4 against.

Slipper, one of the Lincoln horses that is already receiving attention, belongs to Capt. J. D. Cohn, whose horse Sir Gallahad III, won the race in 1924.

Dick Dawson, the Whatecombe trainer, whose stable narrowly missed winning the race in 1926, when Zionist was second and again last year when Athford just failed, has Lephare and Portraitist in the race, which on "the owners and trainers for courses" theory should receive attention.

Other entrants which would appear to demand consideration on the same theory include Yosemite (Lord Derby), Vatout, Slipper and Charles Quint (Captain Cohn), Polar Bear (Mrs. J. B. Joel) and Knight of the Grail and Porthole (Mr. Sol. Joel).

tribution recently with a break of 1,465 in his match against Inman. Possibly, there is something in the suggestion that the visitors are having a good influence on our players. Certainly, Newman is dispelling the belief which some people have held that his billiards is getting rusty, and that it is time he gave way to a few of the younger players.

19,781 Points in a Week
While Leigh proved no match for Lindrum in their week's game at Sheffield, in spite of a start of 7,000 points. At the conclusion the Australian won by the very wide margin of 9,701 points.

Lindrum went steadily ahead in the penultimate session with breaks of 241, 297, 488, 378, and 202 (unfaded), as against 83, 40, and 97 (twice) by his young opponent. Interval scores:—Lindrum (in play) 13,110; Leigh (rec. 7,000) 9,920. The play in the last phase was just one-sided. Lindrum scored 1,605 and Leigh only 160, the former having innings of 221 (full), 191, 486, 197, and 560, and Leigh 40 and 25.

Final scores:—Lindrum 19,781; Leigh (rec. 7,000), 10,080.

"Gunners" Defeat Kowloon by Odd Goal in Five

In the Somersets versus South China encounter Butcher missed a spot kick which brought in its wake the loss of a very valuable point. The main feature of this contest was the clever display of goalkeeping by Hall and Pau Ka-ping, but it was marred by a South China player being ordered to the dressing room and a "Sets" player being cautioned.

The "Gunners" overcame their opponents by the odd goal in five, thus gaining all four points from Kowloon in their two meetings.

The Athletic gave a convincing display against the Police and left the field at the Stadium the victors by four goals to two.

No goals were scored in the Club versus Chinese "B" fixture, while the South China "A" enjoyed a runaway victory over the R.A.M.C. to the tune of seven goals to one. A penalty goal carried the points for the Somersets against Eastern, and South China "B" romped home by four clear goals over St. Joseph's.

On the Railway ground at Kowloon Mr. W. E. Holland lined up the following players:—

Somersets: Hull; Hui-shan, Hayward; Troth, Mead, Harris; Rayson, Knapp; Earley, Bewley-Bull and Butcher.

South China: Pau Ka-ping; Li Tin-sang; Lau Mau; Leung Yung-tak; Wong Mee-shun; Leung Wing-tak; Lee Tin-sang; Liu Hin; Chu Kwok-suen; Pau Ka-chuen; Pau Ka-in and Ip Pak-wa.

A Vigorous Opening

The Somersets won the toss and called upon their opponents to face the sun. From the place-kick South China went straight to the attack for Liu Hin to send in a good centre which Hall punched clear. The ball was returned giving the "Sets" defenders difficulty but relief came at the expense of a corner, the flag kick being put tamely behind.

The "Sets" then drove their opponents back and were awarded a free kick from two yards outside the penalty area, but Pau Ka-ping cleared the ball. In the next minute Mead sent in a fast drive but Pau Ka-ping cleared.

From a throw-in Knapp kicked into the goalmouth for Pau again to bar success, but he failed to clear and Earley, who gained possession, drove over the bar.

The Chinese then had a period of attacking, but they were subdued by Hui-shan and Hayward. Midfield play was the order for the next few minutes and South China's front line gained ground; their run was spoiled, however, the shot being put behind.

At the other end, Earley made another effort but Pau was there. Continuing the attack, the "Sets" forced a corner; nothing materialised from the flag kick. Hall was then tested by Wong Mee-shun and in the next minute Liu Hin put in a good centre for Hall to gather well and clear.

From a breakaway the Soldiers threatened, but had to be content with a corner which was cleared. A thrilling piece of play then followed, Rayson centring across the goal mouth for Earley to miss. Butcher returned the shot to Earley, whose terrific drive was cleverly saved by Pau Ka-ping.

For the remainder of the first half repeated attacks came from the Somersets but Pau Ka-ping was in form and stopped all shots, until the "Sets" were awarded a penalty. Bewley-Bull took the spot kick but found Pau Ka-ping too good, the keeper neatly tipping the high drive over the bar, thus clearing the corner.

Player Ordered Off

Leung Yin-chan was then ordered to the dressing room and from the free kick offside robbed the "Sets" of a goal. Butcher then came under the ban of the Referee and was cautioned, and from the free kick Hall cleared. Pau Ka-ping made further saves and the interval arrived without any score.

Half-time: Somersets 0, South China 0.

After the resumption midfield play was the order, with both elevens struggling to gain the upper hand. The "Sets" eventually made a good forward movement for Knapp to open the scoring after splendid combined play.

The reverse put South China on their heels, and following a dangerous rush, Hayward miskicked for Pau Kachuen to gain possession and shoot, but Hall effected a splendid save. In the next minute Hall was again tested by Wong Mee-shun.

At the other end Rayson flashed the ball across the goal mouth for Butcher to put behind. The "Sets" ruined a good scoring chance by Earley being offside.

The Closing Stages

End-to-end play followed with the advantage of the exchanges with the Somersets, but they could not get the ball past Pau Ka-ping. The Chinese took up the running for Pau Ka-chuen to put over the bar, and a little later South China equalised by the aid of Wong Mee-shun.

In the closing stages the "Sets" went all out to gain the lead but the final whistle sounded without further scoring. The Soldiers had lost a valuable point. The main feature of this encounter was the great display of both goalkeepers, Pau Ka-ping being the outstanding player of the two.

Result: Somersets 1, South China 1.

ATHLETIC v. POLICE

On the Stadium ground at North Point L.S.B.A. Atkinson lined up the following players:—

Athletic: Chan Sik-pui; Lum Yik-yung; Lai Yik-tat; Leung Yik-tong; Wong Shui-wah; Ho Chai-yin; Tso Kwai-shing; Ho Ka-keung; Wong Pak-chung; Suen Kam-shun and Chan Kwong-lu.

Police: Clarke; Howarth, Williams; Johnson, Orme, Bentley; Gowan, McGrenvy, Frazer, Clarke and Talbot.

Athletic Start Well

The Police won the toss and elected to play with the sun at their backs. In the early stages Chan Kwong-lu missed a good scoring chance when he was well placed. By a good combined movement on the right the Police advanced, but the effort went to waste by Frazer being offside.

The Chinese then forced matters and, to get out of difficulties, Howarth conceded a corner, but Tso Kwai-shing's flag kick went behind. Wong Pak-chung tried a long shot but found Clarke safe and in the next minute Clarke was forced to put behind. Ho Ka-keung headed the flag kick wide.

Hands against Johnson gave the Athletic a penalty and Ho Chai-yin made no mistake with the spot kick to open the scoring. From the place kick the Athletic again got through, but the thrust was spoiled by Ho Ka-keung being offside.

Good Chance Missed

Continuing the pressure Ho Ka-keung gained possession, though he missed a good scoring chance by shooting wide.

The Police broke away for McGrenvy to crown a particularly good effort by finding the net from a rebound off the cross-bar.

Just before the interval Howarth called a halt to Tso Kwai-shing, who was on a dangerous run.

Half-time: Athletic 1, Police 1.

A Lost Opportunity

In the opening minute after the resumption the Athletic should have regained the lead. Clarke left his citadel to miss the ball, which struck the upright and rebounded into play with none of the Chinese forwards near enough to snap up the chance.

Howarth played a sound game at right back and repeatedly stopped dangerous raids. Suen Kam-shun next had hard luck by shooting into the side of the net with a fast low drive.

Over-egerness on the part of the Chinese spoiled several good chances by being offside, until Suen Kam-shun snapped up Tso Kwai-shing's pass to find the net well out of Clarke's reach.

From a free kick Leung Yik-tong placed the ball in the goal mouth for Clarke to effect a splendid save. The ball landed at the feet of Suen Kam-shun, who sent in a terrific drive that beat Clarke all the way. Tso Kwai-shing, after getting round two opponents, scored a delightful goal. The Police went to the attack and McGrenvy headed into the net from Orme's pass. Time arrived with the Athletic well worthy of their victory.

Result: Athletic 4, Police 2.

R.A. v. KOWLOON

Played on the Military ground at Sookumpoo. Mr. T. G. Stokes lined up the following teams:—

R.A.: Fletcher; Searle, Frazer; Watson, Ward, Gardner; Rodgers, Allen, Gill, Moore, Walker.

Kowloon: Hawk; Guest, Pile; Nichols, Downman, Dunnet; Pile, Hendley, Cotton, Miles, Eastman.

Gunners Repeat Success

The Gunners repeated their success of November, by beating their opponents by the odd goal in five. Gill had a day out and scored his side's three goals.

Kowloon were not at full strength and lacked finish, but Nichols, at right half, played a sound game and kept Walker well under control.

Mid-way through the first session Gill, gaining possession outside the penalty area, sent in a fast shot which was deflected into the net off Guest.

Some good exchanges followed and Cotton tested Fletcher with a high lob, but the goalkeeper cleared well. Kowloon then forced two fruitless corners, and continued to press, but Pile's centre was sent high over by Miles.

The Gunners transferred play and Gill, gaining possession, sent in a strong drive from 25 yards which gave Hawk no chance.

Half-time: R.A., 2; Kowloon, 0.

Kowloon Aggressive

After the interval Kowloon were very aggressive and from a nice centre by Hendley, Miles opened Kowloon's account. They continued to press and from a corner on the right Cotton just missed. Fletcher was now kept busy and cleared a number of good shots, but was eventually beaten by Pile with a nice low drive, well out of the goalkeeper's reach.

The Gunners now took up the running and after some neat close passing, Gill scored his hat trick when he beat Hawk with a fast drive. The Gunners continued to attack and a good shot from Rodgers was put over by Hawk. From the corner Moore's shot went just over.

Good Chances Missed

Kowloon returned to the attack, but good scoring chances were missed by Cotton and Eastman. The Gunners returned and Hawk was kept busy. Gill just missing with a clever shot. Both Watson and Allen went close. Offside against Moore relieved and Kowloon returned, but the Gunners' defence was very safe and the final whistle sounded with them on top.

Result: R.A., 3; Kowloon, 2.

Division II

EASTERN v. SOMERSETS

Played on the Athletic ground, Happy Valley. Referee L. S. B. A. Mann lined up the following teams:—

Eastern: Silva; Lau Ching-yan, Lai Ting-choy; Ng Ying-kay, Cheung Yui-lam, Fung Yui-wai; Lee Bing-tong, Leonard, Salleh, Moosa, Sabhan.

Somersets: Verrier; Groom, Fothergill; Carnellus, Latcham, Legg, Palmer, Guest, Donmead, Loyalham, Evelt.

An Even Game

After a fairly even game the Somersets, by virtue of a penalty, carried off both points. Eastern pressed, and after some good play by Leonard, his parting shot went just over.

The Somersets transferred and good play by Evelt placed Donmead in a nice position, but his shot was well saved by Silva. Evelt was playing well on the left, though his good centres were not taken advantage of and half time arrived with a blank score sheet.

Half-time: Eastern, 0; Somersets, 0.

Fruitless Corner

On resuming Eastern forced a fruitless corner. The Somersets returned and, during a melee in the goal area, Lai Ting-choy handled Legg making no mistake with the spot kick. The Sets continued and a centre by Palmer was miskicked by Silva, but Donmead did not take advantage of the opportunity, his shot going over the bar. The Somersets continued to have most of the play although no further scoring took place.

Result: Eastern, 0; Somersets, 1.

CLUB v. CHINESE "B"

Corporal Martin lined up the following elevens on the Club ground at Happy Valley:—

Club: Stirling; Sloan, Hynes; Hooper, Punchoon, Ralton; Pankhurst, Stoker, Peers, Smith and Thompson.

Chinese "B": Fong Hing-tong; Tung Kong-wing, Tang Ching-pak; Wong Fung-lung, Ng Hung, Cheong Kau-sung; Chui Shui-ting, Shu King-chong, Shu Ting-lai, Chow Kong-hong, Chow Hing-ting.

Club Attack Early

The Club won the spin of the coin but gave their opponents the advantage of the sun at their backs. The home side were the first to settle down and were early to the attack, soon having Tang Ching-pak in difficulties. The Club's front failed to drive home the advantage caused by Tang badly miskicking.

With the "B" side getting to work ding-dong play was the order for a time until the Chinese line advanced, but Hynes intercepted a good pass to Chui Shui-ting in time to avert danger.

The Club put on pressure but were well held for a time. Two corners were conceded to them, the first flag kick being put behind by Tung Kong-wing, a scrumming being the outcome of the second flag kick for Ng Hung to handle when within the area. Punchoon took the spot kick and shot straight at Fong Hing-tong, who cleared.

End to End Play

End to end play then ensued with both sides striving hard to open the scoring, but final efforts at both goals were either weak or wide of the mark. By a good movement between Thompson and Peers and back to Thompson again a goal was promised but Thompson put wide. Stirling then did well to save a good shot from Ng Hung. Pankhurst made a splendid run down his wing to pass to Peers, and the latter player had hard luck with his curling shot. The interval arrived with a blank score sheet.

Half-time: Club 0, Chinese "B" 0.

After the resumption the Club made thrust after thrust, but Tung Kong-wing and Tang Ching-pak were ready to keep their opponents at bay. With both defences on top neither front line could get within shooting distance until Smith got on the run to shoot wide. It was evident at this stage that no goals were forthcoming, the players showing signs of fatigue after a very keen tussle. The final whistle sounded with the ball in mid-field.

Result: Club 0, Chinese "B" 0.

R.A.M.C. v. SOUTH CHINA "A"

Played on the Military ground, Sookumpoo, South China had most of the play and ran out easy winners.

The referee, Sgt. Vickery, lined up the following teams:—

R.A.M.C.: Clarke; McLeavy, Newlands, Flynn, Patterson, Roberts; Goodman, Dickens, Tarney, Devlin, Jensen.

South China "A": Chang Kwan; Lam Kong-pook, Lai Kong-hoi; Ip Koon-hong, Tsang King-tee, Tsang Wai-kin; Wong Ki-leung, Ng Po-kin, Ip Koon-ning, Chan Yin-tin, Ip Yan-sun.

China Open The Score
South China kicked off against the sun and straight away put up a strong attack. After two minutes Chan Yin-tin opened the scoring. South China continued to press and after Newlands had miskicked Wong Ki-leung added a second.

After some midfield play the South China forwards got going and following some good play, Ng Po-kin put his side further ahead. In the next minute the same player added a fourth. The Medicines now transferred play and Jensen reduced the lead with a good shot.

Half-time: R.A.M.C. 1, South China "A" 4.

On resuming, South China attacked and after forcing four successive corners Ng Po-kin scored a fifth. In the next minute Ng Po-kin put in a good shot, but Goodman kicked clear when the goalkeeper was well beaten. From now until the end South China had all the play and further goals were added by Chan Yin-tin and Ip Koon-ning.

Result: R.A.M.C. 1, S. China "A" 7.

S. CHINA "B" v. ST. JOSEPH'S

Played at Caroline Hill, St. Joseph's fielded only ten players and were outplayed. Referee Gnr. Bateman lined up the following teams:—

South China "B": Chan Ki-chung; Tu Kan-ping, Chang Tak; Cheung Kwok-chol, Teung Kum-po, Pang Che-sang; Kwok Hon-yah, Au Lee-hang, Li Man-ting, Chu Fook-tu, Tso Sze-chuen.

St. Joseph's: Omar; Harvey, Souza; Racerix, Marvan; McGrann, Dragon, Gutierrez, Lillaban, Silva.

St. Joseph's Hard Struggle
St. Joseph's kicked off against a slight breeze and immediately made tracks for their opponents' area, but the South China defence beat them back and Li Man-ting, gaining possession, scored with a fast shot which hit Omar before entering the net.

St. Joseph's attacked but Tu Kan-ping cleared and after some pretty passing Au Lee-hang scored a second goal with a beautiful header which had Omar well beaten. St. Joseph's returned to the attack and after some good play by Lillaban, Dragon shot wide. From the goal kick Li Man-ting broke through on his own and gave Omar no chance with a fast shot.

Half-time: South China "B" 3, St. Joseph's 0.

A Good Fight
After some even play in mid-field St. Joseph's pressed, but the South China backs were equal to their attacks and Chan Ki-chung was not troubled with anything that came his way. South China returned to the attack and Chu Fook-tu beat Omar with a low drive.

From now until the end St. Joseph's fought hard but, being a player short told against them when their forwards got moving, but, although beaten by four goals, they put up a good fight.

Result: South China "B" 4, St. Joseph's 0.

EWO v. R.A.

On the St. Joseph's ground at Happy Valley the "aners" and Referee turned out for this fixture, but Ewo's representative arrived on the scene with the information that his club could not field an eleven.

GIANT LINER

Formidable Rival to Germans

"EMPRESS OF BRITAIN"

Rugby, Yesterday.
On May 28 Britain's new giant liner, Empress of Britain, built for the Canadian Pacific Company, will be launched on the Clyde. It is stated that she will prove a formidable rival of the German liner Bremen. In any case she will set up a new Atlantic speed record, for the journey from Southampton to Quebec will be made in five days or less.

When she is put into service early next year Canada will be brought a day and a half nearer this country. With a tonnage of 45,000, the liner will be 20,000 tons larger than any ship now making the journey on the St. Lawrence River—British Wireless Service.

The new motor launch H.D. 11, which W. S. Bailey & Co., Ltd., have just completed for the Marine Surveyor's Department of the Hong Kong Government.

CLUB DE RECREIO'S WALK-OVER

Army Teams Go Down in Second Division

Cricket matches in the League yesterday were confined to Division II, the only fixture down for decision in Division I, that between the University and the Civil Service C.C., being postponed.

Club de Recreio received a walk-over from the Royal Army Ordnance Corps and remain at the head of the table. The Hong Kong C.C. 2nd are, however, hot favourites for the championship. They easily accounted for the Royal Army Service Corps and, incidentally, kept their undefeated record intact.

Civil Service 2nd secured the full three points from the University 2nd.

League II

H.K.C.C. 2ND V. R.A.S.C.

On their own ground, the Hong Kong C.C. 2nd XI had matters much their own way against the Royal Army Service Corps, winning by nine wickets.

Bowlers of the home team were in fine form, Divett (5 for 22) being particularly destructive, although Ashworth (3 for 10) returned a better analysis, comparatively. The visitors were dismissed for 47, Collins being top-scorer with 21 to his credit.

Opening for the winners, Armstrong (11) and Dowler passed their opponents' total without being separated. The latter carried his bat for 59. Scores:—

At Happy Valley, the Civil Service C.C. 2nd XI defeated the second team of the University by 75 runs.

A splendid innings by Paterson (who, in scoring 64 runs executed 13 boundary shots), gave the C.S.C.C. a fine start. The succeeding batsmen, however, fared badly, until Oswald, going in late, contributed an invaluable 22 towards a total of 137.

Paterson and Edmonds then ran through the University side for 62 runs, the former accounting for four wickets for 27 and the latter, five for 33. Davies kept wicket excellently for the winners. Scores:—

Kowloon C.C. v. C.C.C.
On their own ground, the Kowloon C.C. defeated the Craigengower C.C. by five wickets.

A fine performance by S. V. Giltins (a regular player for the University) who made 71 runs was the feature of the visitors' innings. Young F. R. Zimmerman also did well by scoring 25, the total reaching 129. Craigengower batted nine men only.

For Kowloon, the Fincher brothers were once again to the fore, together putting 99 runs out of 135 for five wickets.

The bowling, on both sides, was weak. Scores:—

Strength and endurance

are two of the most valuable virtues you can possess. You can build up your endurance by making certain that your body gets a plentiful supply of the vitamins which are essential to good health. The most vital of these mysterious food factors is vitamin D for it enables your body to absorb all the value of the food you take. Without ample vitamin D your body gets weaker, your nerves become ragged and your endurance and energy decrease.

Ostelin is concentrated vitamin D

Britain in the Seventies

COMMONS AND AMERICA

["England in the Age of the American Revolution"—Book I. Government and Parliament under the Duke of Newcastle; by L. B. Namier, author of "The Structure of Politics at the Accession of George III." 8vo. MacMillan & Co., About 21s. net.]

Mr. Namier, in the preface to his book on The Structure of Politics at the Accession of George III, described it as, in a way, introductory to his main work on the history of Britain in the age of the American Revolution. Of that work the present volume forms the first part. It starts with a chapter on "The Social Foundations of England," which serves as groundwork to the history of the entire period; and then proceeds with a study of Government and Parliament under the Duke of Newcastle, arranged in five parts. The first deals with the constitutional position under George II, and with the personality of Newcastle and of George III, the latter study being largely based on hitherto unpublished letters from him to Lord Bute. Among other points of importance it is shown that about 1760 the King was still a real factor in the government of Britain—the active head of the executive—and that his right freely to choose his Ministers was universally acknowledged.

The second part deals with the history of the first six months of the new reign, the preparations for the election of George III's first Parliament, and with the negotiations and the readjustments within the Government which resulted in the assumption of office by Bute.

The third part of the book examines the Parliament as returned at the General Election of 1761; it contains an analysis of its politics and of the various groups and factions in the House.

In the fourth part, on "The House of Commons and America," Mr. Namier traces what acquaintance with the American Colonies the House had.

Special chapters are devoted to the West Indians, the merchants, the army officers, and the admirals, i.e., to the groups which comprised the greatest number of men connected or acquainted with America. The fifth part deals with the relations between Bute and Newcastle from the spring of 1761 till Newcastle's Parliamentary defeat in December 1762; on closer inquiry the history of those two years loses much of the sinister character with which it has been endowed by imaginative Whig pamphleteers.

["A Short History of British Expansion," by James A. Williamson, author of "Maritime Enterprise, 1485-1558," etc. New Edition. 2 vols. Macmillan & Co., 8 vo. Vol. I. The Old Colonial Empire. 15s. net. Vol. II. The Modern Empire and Commonwealth. 15s. net.]

Since this book was first written in 1919-21 many things have become clear that were then undefined in the history and constitution of the modern British Empire. Political developments in the post-War decade have been far-reaching, and international relations have assumed a new aspect. There has been great activity in the study of the Empire and Commonwealth, and books upon it have been published which exceed in number and importance the output of any previous period of similar length. It has therefore seemed desirable not merely to revise but to rewrite the story of British expansion after 1783. It now contains seventeen chapters in place of the former eight, and about three-fourths of the text is new. The arrangement adopted is to relate the foundation of the units of the modern Empire in separate chapters, and then to continue the history as that of the Empire and Commonwealth as a whole.

["The Later Years of Thomas Hardy, 1891-1928," by Florence Emily Hardy; with portraits in photograph and half-tone, and other illustrations. 8vo. Macmillan & Co., 18s. net.]

"The Early Life of Thomas Hardy," published in November 1928, dealt with the years from his birth in 1840 to 1891, when Tess of the D'Urbervilles appeared. This concluding volume is arranged in four parts with the following headings: Part I. "Tess, Jude, and the End of Prose"; Part II. "Verse to the End of The Dynasts"; Part III. "Time's Laughing-Stocks. Satires of Circumstance, and Moments of Vision"; and Part IV. covers the period of "Life's Decline."

The distinctive qualities of Mrs. Hardy's record of her husband's life and work have been widely recognized, and in no cases more effectively than in the tributes of Mr. J. C. Squire and Mr. Hugh Walpole. In writing of the first volume Mr. Squire pointed out that "Mrs. Hardy has woven her fabric so cunningly and so completely informed her own work with the spirit of her husband, that the joins are very difficult to detect."

Very many pages, particularly in the early chapters, appear to be almost entirely from Mr. Hardy's hand, so full are they of his characteristic tones and terms of expression. . . . This is almost like having a new prose book by Hardy all these years after he made his summary renunciation of what he called "the trade of novel writing." It tells us much more about his life than we know before; it also shows how many of the incidents in his novels were drawn from his personal experiences.

In an article in "The Spectator" Mr. Hugh Walpole said that "Mrs. Hardy has done, in my view, the one inevitable right thing, linking fact to fact, making the background as clear as one of Hardy's own architectural designs, but doing no more than that, and the result is that Hardy's own words—comments, descriptions, ironies, similes—stand out with a beauty and drama that is perhaps only fully realised when the book is closed. . . . This seems to me a grand book—grand in the real sense that it places the reader in direct contact with his original, grand things, nothing and nobody intervening between him and them. That is where Mrs. Hardy has seen so rightly—that it is only Hardy who matters and that everything must go in comparison with him."

JAPAN

Indispensable Book for Travellers

Through the courtesy of Messrs. Thomas Cook & Son, Limited, we have received a copy of the third issue of Japan To-day and Tomorrow, published by the Osaka Mainichi, one of the leading newspapers of the Island Empire of the Orient.

The publishers are nothing if not modest in the use of the adjective "good" in comparing the present with the first two issues, but we are at one with them when they state that "this new edition will merit a prominent place in libraries, schools, offices, homes and everywhere where accurate information about Japan of to-day is sought, presented in an interesting and instructive manner." Moreover, this new edition should prove an indispensable companion for travellers to the Far East, an invaluable source for reference, and a constant and dependable guide for whoever wants to know Japan as it is to-day.

Japan To-day and Tomorrow is a fertile field of knowledge, covering every possible phase of Japanese life, much of which will bear reproduction in the columns of the soundest and best established journals of the East and the West.

Replete with illustrations, besides ten coloured plates, the magazine is a credit to writers, artists, and publishers; and, although Messrs. Thomas Cook & Son have only a very limited number of copies, special applications from any resident of Hong Kong will be favourably considered. In any event, a line to the publishers, the Osaka Mainichi, is bound to have the desired result.

RETIRED MAJOR

A Volume of Snappy Reading

["What Happened to Forester," by E. Phillips Oppenheim; Hodder & Stoughton, 3/6 net.] This book is written in the form of ten short stories, of the varied adventures of a retired soldier from the Army, styled as Major Forester.

Idle, middle-aged and comfortably off, Major Forester decides to pass the time visiting various places of renown on the Continent and London.

Even the most blasé young person would find such adventures more than enough to occupy his time and attention.

Many interesting encounters with international crooks are described.

One wishes that there was a second volume of these adventures; so interesting is this all-too-short but 300 page volume.

A most amusing and witty account is given of the visit of Major Forester's niece who comes to stay with him whilst on the Continent: a typical picture of the modern young flapper who is often more harmlessly amusing than wicked.

The name of the Author is in itself sufficient to recommend this most interesting book, which is bound to give the reader a humorous, exciting, non-stop reading of most absorbing wealth of adventure, occupying some hours.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

Christianity As World Renouncing

MODERN CHURCHMAN'S VIEWS

[By the Rev. A. C. Bouquet, D.D., Hulsean Lecturer, 1921-1925.]

Before making any attempt at an historical survey of Christian renunciation, it will, I think, be best to devote a brief space to an endeavour to think clearly upon the nature and causes of renunciation in general, and upon the principles which govern its exercise.

First and foremost among the causes is the comparative shortness of human life, whether racial or individual. Obviously no human being can be or is expected to undergo every possible human experience. Just as there is division of labour, so there must be division of experience. Sooner or later man comes to feel the futility of trying to cram into the short span of his earthly existence everything that can possibly be done. It may be pleasant to taste briefly as many different types of experience as possible, but he who fails in good time to make a selection and to confine himself to serious specialisation within that department of experience for which he seems by temperament and training to be suited will find himself sooner or later, so to speak, Jack of all trades and master of none. The principle upon which such a selection is based will be determined by the classification of values adopted in the case of each individual. I do not propose to embark upon a long treatise on axiology, but merely to remark that since we cannot realise all values at the same time, or even successively, we must come to some agreement as to which we shall choose for realisation, and in what order.

A Narrowing of Life
Selection then being necessary, the concentration upon a selected value involves inevitably a slight, if not a serious narrowing of life. This narrowing is due to the abjuration of experiences which seem to be of less value than the one or more selected. The result is in some form or another the life of renunciation. The minimum of renunciation is, I suppose, to be found in the 'doctrine of the mean,' according to which nothing is to be indulged in to excess, but only to just that extent which is proper and fitting. A full life may thus include a taste of most of the more important and interesting experiences possible to the human being, but there will be limit and proportion in the tasting. While on the one hand it must be admitted that a number of persons who have practised the renunciation of a considerable section of human experience have done so because they held a pessimistic view of the universe, or at any rate of its human denizens and their nature, and believed that the blissful fulfillment of their destiny demanded a sacrifice on their part of many things which, though seeming intrinsically harmless, were nevertheless dangerous to their eternal welfare, on the other hand renunciation does not necessarily involve pessimism. Indeed it is generally quite possible for one to take a wholly optimistic view of the universe and of human nature, and yet to renounce a large section of possible experiences for the sake of another section which seems better.

Element of Renunciation
It follows from this that there will be an element of renunciation in the lives of all individuals, by whatever principles they may be governed; but that the determination to select lower rather than high experiences cannot merit the title of renunciation, at any rate in the ascetic sense, in which it is used in this paper. In what ensues, therefore, the use of the term will be limited to a conscious rejection of an experience or experiences of the lower sort in favour of a higher experience or group of experiences. I realise that this involves the question as to what is meant by the terms 'higher' and 'lower,' and although there is a general convention as to their use in axiology, yet here I fancy is where we may have occasion for controversy.

Now there will be groups of people who have this in common, that they have made the same kind of selection, and there will be groups of people who hold that whatever varieties of selection may be permissible to human beings as individuals, there will be certain selections and abjurations which ought to be made by all. And further still, when these various selections of experience have been agreed upon, it will sooner or later become an accepted principle that to lapse from any such selection of experience is of the nature of an evil. Steps will then have to be taken whereby the individual may be enabled to train himself so as to prevent the possibility of a lapse, and in some cases the community will consent to inflict punishment upon those who become guilty of lapses.

The "Boy" Chinese house and the Duster

Apparently those in Hong Kong. Thus a writer—a lady or a woman?—gets this off her chest in the Straits Times. China, nursery of custom, decreed some centuries ago that the dusting of tables, chairs, and all shiny surfaces could be comfortably accomplished by means of a bunch of cock's feathers. One can imagine the pride of the first Celestial to contrive this ineffectual device. How he would flourish it about here, there, and everywhere, quite unconscious of the supreme insensitiveness of his proceedings. For it is with the same satisfaction that the Chinese "boy" of to-day waxes our Chinese dust hither and thither, using the remote cousin of that first feather brush, equally indifferent to its unhygienic qualities, though without the excuse of equal ignorance. To divorce him from it is well-nigh impossible. With characteristic obstinacy he will dust with a feather brush—or not at all. This seems, however, not only typical of him, but typical also of most of housekeeping out here.

Clumsy makeshifts were a necessity, the "boy" (old-style) was an ideal servant. As every one will acknowledge he was resourcefulness itself, able to convert a bamboo or a kerosene tin into almost any household utensil, after a fashion, which served for that day. Those pioneer times are over, and there is little excuse for continuing to use the clumsy substitutes which were the despair of our great grandmothers. The modern Chinese no longer shines as a wonderful servant, but as an astute person who has realised that the only modern appliances which will not involve him in serious hard work are of the electric variety. Therefore he welcomes the vacuum cleaner where he refuses to look at a perfectly good hair-broom. He has handed on this prejudice to servants of other nationalities, so that all favour the germ-distributing feather brush, and sweep up with futile coconut or bamboo brooms.

ther brush, and sweep up with futile coconut or bamboo brooms.

Example of the Dutch

Anyone who has travelled at all in the Dutch East Indies must have been impressed by the far better service enjoyed in most Dutch households. In Sumatra and Java the Chinese "boy" is barely tolerated. Dutch women prefer to train raw natives. And an excellent job they make of it! (There is none better than a "boy" or amah trained in a Dutch household). For the benefit of British women (or ladies) who despise learning Chinese this little par. should be interesting: There is no doubt that a working knowledge of Kitchen Malay is essential to run a house out here properly, and, though it may sound a bit severe, still British women are distinctly lazy over this matter. They are too prone to fall in with the existing order of things domestic, and, having got over their first astonishment, all too soon fail to notice the shortcomings of their homes. Hence the dearth of good brooms in our shops.

Frightened apt to frighten Brides

The men too, are their brides with the appalling consequences of any undue criticism of the domestic shortcomings, so that the British bride is encouraged rather to sit back and let the "boy" carry on. This kind of "Mem" is the Chinese boy's ideal—but it doesn't make for good service in the end. It is a pity that more British women do not follow the Dutch custom, and train Malay or Javanese boys. They are not only cheaper, than the Chinese, but pleasant-voiced, cheerful, and obedient. They soon learn the ways of the household, even if they have never seen European utensils before.

Moreover they No Obsolete haven't as a rule Conventions the tiresome obstinacies or obsolete conventions of the Chinese, such as his attachment to his feather brush. They are generally willing, and expect to put in a reasonable amount of work per diem. There is satisfaction, too, in teaching an untrained man, as he will learn your ways, and if he acquires any prejudices they will be those you impart as you show him his job. Those people who enjoy the services of really good Chinese servants will not, of course, agree, and may even think that the writer has been unfortunate in her experiences with Chinese.

Native same fair writer "Boys" says that she had Preferred had the same Chinese cook her employment for more than 14 years, and that it was he himself who first suggested she should train a native boy. He volunteered also the opinion that the modern youth of his country were all suffering from the same complaint—swollen head, which prevented them from learning anything but how to swank! She had had a succession of Chinese boys who were really only waiters, and knew nothing about housework, and cared less. Since that time she has always employed Chinese in the kitchen, and Malay or Javanese in the house. This arrangement works very well indeed—not only as regards cleanliness and good service daily, but in the matter of holidays. Their New Year and other festivals rarely coincide so that "the Mem" is never left without any servants at all, or annoyed by a disgruntled one having to stay when he wants to celebrate with his friends.

A correspondent Right who signs himself Numbers "Central 4641" tells us that amongst the many records broken at Happy Valley during the recent race meeting no mention has been made of his own—which is that of having made about 150 telephone calls without once getting a wrong number! Our correspondent asks whether this record can be beaten, and modestly claims no credit for himself, except for one thing—that, when very young, he was told by a man of experience "not to jig the hook." It is his happy lot, he adds, to put this experience on record, and he winds up by calling for "Hats off to the Telephone Company."

No more nerviness

Tired jangled nerves make life a burden. Everything seems to go wrong. Little causes produce great effects in irritability, little worries appear magnified into great anxieties. The sufferer gets no enjoyment himself and can give no pleasure to others—and all because his nerves are over-strained.

This can be very simply remedied. Only plenty of sound healthy sleep is needed. This normal restful sleep cannot habitually be induced by stimulants or drugs. They only dull the underfed nerves temporarily—natural sleep will only come when the nerves are properly nourished.

The most pleasant and certain way of doing this is by taking the right food—Glax-ovo, that contains the wonderful "Ostella" vitamin D combined with malt and rich milk and is flavoured with chocolate, giving a delicious food-drink that acts like magic, nourishing the starved nerves and inducing soothing sleep.

Tone up your jaded nerves by taking a cup of Glax-ovo before going to bed and benefit from health-giving sleep.

Kowloon and a Municipality

It is as well that the Kowloon Residents' Association, at its first public meeting since the departure of Sir Cecil Clementi, should make a studied reference to certain remarks by His Excellency derogatory to the idea of a Municipal Council in this Colony.

Pointing out that the Association has been privileged to act in a purely advisory capacity in regard to Government administration in the past, the President, as the official spokesman, added that they must not lose sight of the fact that its official status is nil. The Association cannot entirely agree with Sir Cecil's viewpoint and is of opinion that the time will come when the Government will find it advisable to institute some form of municipal control of purely domestic matters.

The Association rightly feels that it is the duty of any community to take an intelligent interest in municipal affairs, and it hopes that the Government will see the wisdom of apportioning certain duties to a local Council which would be actuated by a civic spirit all to the good of the Colony.

It is well that an opinion almost diametrically opposed to that expressed by Sir Cecil Clementi should thus early be given prominence, as otherwise it might subsequently be asserted that "silence gave consent," and that the views of Sir Cecil were those of the entire community, or at least of the great majority.

What Sir Cecil feared was that the creation of municipalities would duplicate the administrative machinery of the Colony to an intolerable extent. He feared that it would be excessively uneconomical and would be open to all the political objections which would beset democratic institutions if introduced into Hong Kong.

It is some years since the Sunday Herald openly advocated the creation in due course of a Municipal Council, and the observations made by the Kowloon Residents' Association are merely an echo of what has been written in this column and in the China Mail many times within the past five years, to go no further back. With the tremendous development of Kowloon it cannot be doubted that the work of efficient administration is rapidly outgrowing the available resources of automatic Government Departments. The problem cannot be solved by adding to the personnel of the Unofficial membership either of the Legislative Council or the Sanitary Board. Nor can it be solved by increasing to a considerable degree the number of Civil Servants, the great majority of whom have had no training whatever in civic as distinct from purely Governmental administration. In the absence of opportunities to make themselves thoroughly acquainted with civic work they undoubtedly do well; but that is beside the point. Certain duties must in the course of time be apportioned to a Council of some sort, no matter what name it may be given, if the interests and the rights of the ratepayers are to be carefully considered and preserved. In other Crown Colonies there exist Municipal Councils, Sanitary Boards, and Rural Boards, none of which can be said to duplicate the administrative machinery of the Colony to an intolerable extent; none of which can be said to be excessively uneconomical; and few, if any, of which are open to the political objections that beset democratic institutions.

Having endorsed the policy advocated for so long by the Sunday Herald we look to the Kowloon Residents' Association to ensure that the subject does not become dormant or forgotten!

HONG KONG FAIRY STORIES

One Scot is keeping his S.C.A.A. race sweep ticket in the hope he'll make good with it at the 1931 annual meeting.

KWANGSI CAMPAIGN

Truce Follows a Severe Battle

HEAVY LOSSES

Canton, Last Night.

Rumours of a compromise between the leaders of Kwangtung and Kwangsi, still persist. A truce has been ordered by both sides after a severe battle at Paklau (south west of Wuchow) at which Chang Fa-kuei's army and Wang Shao-hung's army lost heavily. The former's army lost over ten machine guns and over 2,000 troops, killed or wounded. The Kwangsi armies lost a similar number.

At the Paklau battle, Hlung Hong-ping's division (Chun Tai-tung's followers) lost nearly half of his troops, being severely defeated by Chang Fa-kuei's troops. The Cantonese and the combined forces of Chang Fa-kuei and the Kwangsi had to retire in order to collect their remnants before another battle could be started. A truce, therefore, was automatically ordered by both sides.

After the truce had been enforced, the politicians of both sides engineered for a compromise. Their reasons were: (1) that both sides had been at war for over a year and were unable to eliminate either side; (2) that a war was going to start in the north between President Chiang Kai-shek and Yen Hui-shan; (3) that both sides wish to see the result of the northern war.

Canton's Demands

It is reported that the Cantonese leaders demanded that the Kwangsi forces should part with Chang Fa-kuei (either by disarming him or by leaving him to be executed) and formally to declare their allegiance to the Central Government before the negotiation could begin.

Mr. Ho Tung, Li Chai-sum's former Aide-de-Camp, accompanying Mr. Li Tai-man, Li Chai-sum's brother, arrived in Canton from Nanking the other day and went to interview Chan Tai-tang. They returned to Canton yesterday from Wuchow, and Chan Chak and Au Yang-kui invited them to dinner last night. Their visit is reported to be in connection with the peace of Kwangtung. It stated that Mr. Li Chai-sum might be released and again resume control of Kwangtung. (From a Correspondent.)

Report of General Tsai

Canton, Last Night.

In an interview with press representatives, General Tsai Ting-kai, who came back by plane to report to Chairman Chan Ming-shu, stated that there was no special mission for his return except to report to Chairman Chan and await his instructions concerning the present campaign. His newly organized training company was inaugurated yesterday at the eastern suburb.

Relative to the defeat of the enemy at Paklau, the general said that the Rebels had retreated to Kwelyuen and Chumchow. At present, his own army is stationed in Yungyuen for recuperation and recruitment, while the divisions under Generals Yu Hon-mow and Chiang Kwang-ni are on the heels of the enemy.

A portion of the rebel forces, according to reports, is retreating from Kwelyuen and Chumchow towards Wanyuen and Nanning, and others to Luichow.

Regarding the 6th Route Army and the Hunan troops, General Tsai gave the information that they are advancing towards Chaping and Moonshan, and that the Hunan troops have already captured Chuenchow. No serious encounter is said to have occurred, as the enemy has lost much of his morale.

The General concluded with the assurance that all the army units at the front unanimously voted their allegiance to support the Central Government.—Canton News Agency.

BETTER FRIENDS

Rugby, Yesterday.

Sir Esme Howard, the retiring Ambassador at Washington, and Lady Isabella Howard arrived in London yesterday.

Sir Esme Howard stated that he had definitely retired from diplomatic life. After knowing the United States for nearly 35 years, he was convinced that the feeling there toward Great Britain had during that time steadily improved. There was no longer what used to be known as an old grudge against Great Britain. It was dying away, and the settlement of the Irish question and of the British debt to America had caused a great change in the public opinion of the United States towards this country.—British Wireless Service.

WITTY SPEECHES

Local St. David's Society Holds Annual Dinner

The President of the local St. David's Society, Mr. D. M. Richards, at the annual dinner held at Lane Crawford's last night, laid emphasis upon the fact that the gathering was more of a "family" function than an elaborate ceremonial. In this connection, he stated, they were grateful to a lady member who had suggested community singing of Welsh songs as a feature of the evening.

The innovation proved a great success, later in the evening, everyone joining in heartily with the well-known airs.

"Hon Wlad fy Nhadau"

About fifty members of the Society, and friends, attended the dinner, and after the Royal Toast had been honoured, the President proposed the toast of "Hon Wlad fy Nhadau" ("Land of my Fathers").

He said that it was his great pleasure and honour to propose the toast for the second year in succession. The Society was not a large one, but what it lacked in numbers it made up in loyalty.

Sir William Rees Davies, a past President, who revived the Society some ten years ago, had adjured them not to allow a year to pass without a celebration of some kind. They had kept his request in mind, and their annual reunion was the occasion for them to give expression to that love of country which was the greatest characteristic of every Welshman.

Love of Country

He himself thought that love of country played possibly a greater part in the life of Welshmen than in that of any other nationalities. The hills of Wales, in bygone days, had literally saved the nation from extinction, and there was a sentiment about the phrase "Hon Wlad fy Nhadau" which was not adequately conveyed in the translation "Land of my Fathers."

"Our Guests"

Mr. David Davies, Vice-President of the Society, briefly proposed the toast of "Our Guests" with which he coupled the names of the Rev. Frank Short and Dr. Kirk.

Both gentlemen suitably replied.

A delightful musicale was given by Mr. D. M. Richards, Mrs. Rendall, Mrs. Hooper, Mr. Phillips, and Captain Thomas, whilst Mr. David Davies contributed a highly-appreciated reading in Welsh.

The services of Mr. Longyear, as accompanist, were much appreciated.

News in Brief

Mrs. G. P. de Martin is to distribute the prizes at the Kowloon branch of the Wah Yan College, Mongkok, on March 11 at 3 p.m.

CORRESPONDENCE

BENEVOLENT SOCIETY

[To the Editor of "Sunday Herald"]

Sir,—I should be very glad if you would kindly bring to the notice of your readers the annual meeting of the Benevolent Society, which is to take place on Monday, March 3, at the "Cheer O" Canteen, at 11.15 a.m.

Last year's attendance of the general public was very disappointing, and the Committee hopes that this year we may attract a larger number of the Hong Kong public who are interested in social service.

I should like to express at the same time the sincere thanks of the Committee for the untiring and valuable assistance given them by the Press during the past year.

Yours etc.,

BELLA BOURNHOHN.

TAIPO TOPICS

[From the United Press Staff Correspondent at the Front.]

W. M. C. A. (Taipo) is planning to install a short wave wireless set in the trailer behind the five piece man fire engine and tour the big city broadcasting the stench arising from the Garbage Heap at Taipo Market and the super-stench from the Round House at Taipo and Taipo Market Railway Stations. All five men hauling the engine are to have their trousers legs doped with antiseptic in order that the dogs shall move them along at a sufficient speed to make the dynamo work and thus ensure that everybody gets a bit.

Feeling that the special need of that malarial waste, the New Territories, demanded the formation of a body charged with the supervision of school broadcasting in the New Territories schools, the B.B.C. has devolved the educational responsibility for all such broadcasts to the Taipo District Council. This body is composed of the first prize bunch of law breakers in the Colony who have been known to allow workmen to repair the roads and even oil up the troubled waters where mosquitoes thrive on the Sabbath Day, and further to shake locks, to lead horses along the railway, crack bottles, etc., and why the B.B.C. should deal with such rough-nocks is non-understandable.

One of Taipo's secret sports is for, say five men to sit at a round table with their hands tied behind their backs. A nail is driven into the centre of the table, to which is attached a length of rope yarn. At the other end of the rope yarn is a mosquito tied up by the hind leg. A seventh man seizes up the mosquito with a stick, and it flies frantically round the table. As the mosquito passes, each man dives at him with his open mouth, until, finally, one man gets him, and he, of course, gets the prize, which usually consists of horse's neck.

MIRROR HINTS

How and Where They Can Be Used

There is no greater boon to the housewife who works out her own scheme of interior decoration, than the mirror, especially if her room be small or her windows are not placed in a manner that lends balance to the room. The mirror is, in itself, decorative, and is to be had in so many shapes—oval, oblong, panned and square—that some shape may be found, and some type of frame, that will be sure to fit in with the chosen type of furnishings.

Mirrors may be used in the hall, the living room, the dining room or boudoir, and there is practically little to be feared, if one considers their value of space. So many apartments have windows only on one side of a room, and many times the opposite wall is unbroken, even by a doorway.

This makes it difficult to preserve balance—especially of colour—for one makes the most of her window treatments, and thus masses her decoration on one side of the room. But a mirror carefully placed will reflect both the windows and their drapes, and the entire decorative scheme can be built around it.

Any number of apartments, and certain houses of the smaller type, have a hall so narrow that it presents a distinct problem to the decorator. In some of these halls a mirror may be used effectively, if the windows of the room into which the hall opens are placed opposite that opening.

The mirror, placed over a table of the console type, will reflect the windows, give an illusion of space and depth and provide colour. The glass may be crystal-clear, and the frame in Italian, French or Colonial style, finished in gilt, polychrome, gilt and blue or brown or any one of the more familiar woods.

TENNIS KIT

Tennis "fans" are showing a preference for the pastel shades, which do not after all distract the eye any more than white, so long as only one colour is used.

There is a tendency now for tennis coats to match dresses, instead of creating a vivid colour contrast, and there has been lately seen some delightful three-piece affairs, carried out in Shantung.

The skirts were pleated at the sides and the plain, sleeveless bodices were finished with lingerie collars, with narrow pipings on suite with the frocks and matching suede belts.

Pyjama Suit

A dainty three-piece pyjama suit in fancy crepe de chine. The coatee can be worn as a scarf or tie, as seen in photograph.—(Marshall and Sadgrove).

NOVEL COLOURS

From the Riviera comes the news that all the gay, youthful shades, pastel-blue, pink, buttercup-yellow, apple-green, etc., are being effectively combined with black.

One sees, for instance, a black crepe frock, with the skirt cut in godets of equal length, scalloped round the hem, and an inserted lingerie vest of pink killed georgette; and the accompanying coat, which may be made of fine faced cloth or tussore is carried out in the same shade of pink, with a touch of black at collar and cuffs.

Another model will have a skirt of black crepe "Sokol" (one of the new, supple spring crepes) and a bodice of apple-green satin, made up on the mat side; in this case two frills are set at the top of the skirt, basque fashion, and the end of the short bolero jacket, also, of course, black, forms a third frill at the waist.

Belge is out of favour as a single colour scheme, though it is often used rather effectively in conjunction with lacquer-red.

CHARMING BLOUSES

Quite a number of women are lamenting what they are pleased to describe as "the death of the jumper suit."

They have apparently not realised that although the jumper suit as a composite garment may not exist in the latest collections, its place has been very adequately taken by the blouse—a very charming affair in its modern variety which looks extremely smart when worn with an odd skirt that either matches or effectively contrasts in colour.

Only the jumper suit in another guise! So are we deceived!

SNATCH-PROOF BAG

A woman's handbag which is designed to foil the snatch-thief is exhibited in the London Section of the British Industries Fair at Olympia.

On one side of the bag—the side turned outwards when it is carried—is a strong leather strap or band. The owner puts her forearm through the loop formed by this band and the side of the bag, and for complete safety has only to close her fingers round the front edge of the bag.

"We designed and made this handbag as soon as the bag-snatching epidemic began," the exhibitor said, "and we are taking care to see that the price will bring it within reach of the majority of women."

FOR OUR DANCERS

To possess both health and beauty is the desire of every woman, but so often the pursuit of the second entails the loss of the first. There is, however, one beauty treatment which gives health as well; namely, dancing. Even ball-room dancing is most beneficial, but better still is either Greek or operatic dancing. This kind of dancing should be practised in your own room. It is easier if you put some appropriate tune on the gramophone.

Dance for about ten to twenty minutes every day, more if you are not tired. You will find you gain slenderness, suppleness and grace. If this practice is carried out regularly, you will acquire the bright eyes and rich glowing complexion only to be seen in women of perfect health. Although fashion now demands that the lines of the figure must be more feminine, slenderness is still necessary to show your clothes to the best advantage.

Dancing will give you that slender figure. Ball-room dancing in this Colony has its advantages and disadvantages as compared with ball-room dancing at home. For instance, in the former case out here the ball-rooms are usually open to the air. There is no chance of the close smoke-filled atmosphere of the home ball-room, which is so devastating to the complexion and ruinous to the health. Here we have open windows all round, and fans to disperse any smoke that may linger and keep the air fresh and clear.

At home so many of the dancing clubs in London are below the ground level. This causes bad ventilation and the atmosphere after the first hour or so resembles that of a London fog, and is most unwholesome. Nothing is worse for beauty or health than to spend hours in a hot, badly-aired room, choked with tobacco smoke. On the other hand, in this Colony we have the disadvantage of a climate quite unsuitable for dancing. Women have the advantage over men in the matter of evening dress.

For the Bathing Season

This striking beach suit consists of a backless bodice joined to bell-bottomed trousers, and is carried out in a red, orange and white check Jacquard pattern. The unique beach "jewellery" is in painted cork, an idea which will become very fashionable this season.—("Derby," London).

"TUCK IN" BLOUSES

Four distinct types of blouses are "in the picture" at the moment. First of all, the one cut on masculine lines, with a turn-down collar and link cuffs, suitable for sports wear or as an accompaniment to the severe type of tailor-made.

This "tucks in," and is to be seen in a variety of washing materials, linen-lawn, toile de soie, and all the washing silks.

Another favourite tailor-made style is cut on waistcoat lines, with a double-breasted front, finishing in points. Another, bloused slightly at the waist-line, with a cross-over front and tied at the side, will fit snugly over the hips.

And finally, there is the coatee shape, particularly suitable for wearing without a coat, though, as it fits closely and takes up little room, it can easily form part of a coat and skirt ensemble also.

VELVET'S THE THING

Plain velvets with patterned velvets make the smartest of the new Winter frocks. The patterned material is probably used for the entire frock, with the exception of the godets of plain velvet which are inserted low in the skirt. Corded velvet is a change from last season's materials. Moire velvets are used when something very smart is needed in the way of an evening frock, and chiffon, embellished with velvet flowers is still a great favourite. The softer the velvet and the more vaguely figured it is, the better it is liked.

SHOULDERS COME FIRST

There is a lot of talk about slender hips, and the art of corsetry is bent on improving their appearance—yet it is doubtful whether hips are so important as shoulders, at least on those house frocks of soft woolly materials and fine jersey cloths. Billowy bertha collars in pale lawns and pique take the place of less imposing turn-over collars. Draped scarves are graceful, and fishies give a picture-frock look to the bodice. But, perhaps, the greatest virtue of the draped neck-line is that, in contrast, it makes the hips appear slimmer than they really are.

BRIDESMAIDS IN MARIGOLD

On February 4, Miss Joan Bromley Davenport and Mr. Ronald Morgan were wed in St. Paul's Church, Knightsbridge.

Mrs. Richard Norton's beautiful child Sarah was one of the leaders, and was accompanied by Mrs. Gerard Sandeman's daughter Susan, and by Miss Rosemary Lowther, the small daughter of the Hon. Christopher and Mrs. Lowther.

Six girls in all, and the two pages were dressed in fresh daffodil yellow. The girls' net frocks were made to shade from pale primrose to deep marigold to match the wreaths of those flowers on their heads. The boys had silk shirts, with velvet trousers.

In seeking for new ideas for the headress, Miss Bromley Davenport alighted on quite an original plan. In place of orange blossom or silver leaves she wore just a simple twist of the same parchment-tinted ring velvet of which her clinging gown was made.

Her veil of tulle fell over the dress just to the waist, at the back, and the train did not commence until the waist-line was defined, according to the latest law of fashion.

CHILD MIND

How to Shape It on Right Lines

The value of good reading for the growing child has never been questioned yet few of us take pains consciously to cultivate our children's tastes so that they will turn naturally to good books instead of trash.

Literary taste is cultivated in the nursery. If you hope to have your child enjoy good books when he is able to read for himself, you must select with an eye to their intrinsic merit the stories and poems which you read and tell him.

There is written for children a great deal of silly, sentimental stuff devoid of all literary or moral worth—idiotic prettifications about children and animals which are supposed to be a proper diet for the child mind.

The classic fairy and folk tales, told as simply as possible, and the Mother Goose Rhymes still remain among the best we have to offer children.

Recently some excellent things have been written in an effort to turn into stories the child's own experience of life. They have proven most successful in kindergartens and nursery schools.

It is worth getting the advice of experts to help you in selecting your child's books both while he is little and after he has already learned to read for himself.

This extravagance menaces health

To brush teeth and forget gums, is an extravagance that may demand as its price health, beauty and youth. In this life of ease and luxury, gums are under-nourished and under-exercised. If neglected, they surrender to diseases that sweep the system and often cause loss of teeth. Only dental care can stem the advance of gum diseases once they are contracted. Prevention is easier and less painful.

Be liberal with yourself. See your dentist every six months. Continue to brush your teeth. But also brush gums vigorously with the dentifrice designed to help keep them firm and sound... Forhan's for the Gums.

When you have used this dentifrice for a few days you'll notice a vast improvement in the way your gums look and feel. In addition, note how effectively and safely it cleans teeth and helps to protect them from decay. Get a tube of Forhan's from your druggist and start using it today.

Gathering in Aid of Funds

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED

In connection with the gathering at the Peninsula Hotel on March 28, organised by the Hong Kong Women's Guild and Ministering Children's League the China Mail is informed that detailed arrangements have now been made.

The management of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Hotels, Limited, have kindly consented to grant the use of the public rooms in the Peninsula Hotel on the date in question. It has been arranged that the Tea Dance will take place in the Rose Room, and that the Roof Garden will be set aside for mah jong, whilst in the public dining room on the first floor there will be Bridge and whist. In connection with the latter there will be no progressive games, it being anticipated that players would prefer to make up their own parties. In the case of Bridge there will be prizes for the highest points obtained and also a "booby" prize. Three rubbers will be played, and a definite time fixed for the closure of play. In the case of whist, play will consist of eighteen hands, and here again prizes will be awarded to the highest and "booby" scores respectively.

The afternoon's programme will commence at 3.30 and continue until seven o'clock. Tea will be served in all rooms from 4.30 till 5 p.m. In connection with the Tea Dance prizes will be given, the method of awarding being by a hidden spot on the floor.

At six o'clock an auction will be held, Mr. V. C. Labrum officiating. A sheep, signed football, and other novelties will be among the articles offered for sale. Bidding should be spirited.

A flat admission charge of $2 will be made, and visitors will be free to dance or play any of the table games as they desire.

S.P.C.A. BALL

Rapid Sale of Tickets

Tickets for the Fancy Dress Ball organised by the S.P.C.A., are selling rapidly, and that the event will be a great success, is already assured. It is requested that all those who have bought tickets will book their tables without delay, otherwise, with the large number present, some confusion will be inevitable if booking is left until the last moment.

Although the sale of tickets indicates that there will be many small parties, several large parties have been arranged, one of which, numbering over thirty, has decided on a most novel uniformity of fancy dress.

Table reservations may be made at the Hong Hotel.

VARSITY DANCE

Ricci Hall's First Annual Gathering

A COLOURFUL SCENE

The first annual dance of Ricci Hall of the University of Hong Kong was held at the hotel last night. There was a large attendance and, with excellent music supplied by the Brunswick Dance Orchestra, and plenty of fun from carnival novelties, everyone spent a very enjoyable evening. The hall was simply but effectively decorated, and with the pretty costumes of the ladies, presented a colourful scene.

Classical Dancing. Much was added to the enjoyment of the evening by several musical and classical dancing interludes by the Misses Helen and Stella Ho and other artists, including Hawaiian music by Mr. Andrew Chan, and piano and musical saw solos by two modest performers who appeared on the programme simply as "Our Own."

Credit for the success of the dance is due to the officials of the hotel, who have been untiring in their efforts, and also to all the residents of the hotel, each one a very hospitable host who made the large number of visitors feel at home from the start.

The Officials.
Resident:—Rev. Fr. D. Macdonald, S.J.
Chairman:—Mr. E. Wong Tape.
Committee:—Messrs. J. J. Gutierrez, L. A. da Silva, Lee Kalleung, B. H. Schroter, Chung Sik-chiu, and Kwan Wing-hong.
Hon. Treasurer:—Rev. Fr. T. Cooney, S.J.
Hon. Secretary:—Koh Nai-po.

"AND SO TO BED"

Dates Fixed for A.D.C. Production

The dates for the A.D.C.'s performances of James Bernard Fagan's hugely successful costume play, "And so to Bed," have now been definitely fixed as follows:—
Saturday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 22, 25, 27, 28, and 29 at 9.15 p.m.

It is hoped that this will be appreciated by people living in outlying districts and that there will also be a good attendance of students who should welcome the opportunity of seeing a costume play, which is such a rarity in the Far East, particularly one depicting life in the days of the "Merry Monarch" Charles II.

The play depicts a day in the life of the great diarist, Mr. Pepys. The author has explained that the day in question is not actually described in the diary and that it is entirely imaginary. He calls his work a comedy, but there are so many amusing situations that it might almost be described as a farce—and costume farces are rare. Booking will open at the Anderson Music Company on Monday, March 10. We understand that the play will be elaborately mounted and dressed, so that full houses should be the order of the day.

BACHELORS' BALL

Happy Gathering at Club de Recreio

Artistically decorated and brightly illuminated the Clubhouse and grounds of the Club de Recreio, at King's Park, presented a picturesque and animated scene last night, when the Bachelors' Ball was held.

It was very largely attended and, with two Orchestras playing the latest hits, dancing was kept up until almost 3.30 a.m., when the enjoyable party broke up, even then to the regret of many. All who attended were unanimous that the Ball was an unqualified success.

Supper was served on the Club lawn.

THE CALL OF THE WEST

I'm sick of Japan and Formosa,
I'm sick of Hong Kong and Malaya,
And far away spots on the chart are
No place for yours truly to stay.
I've had enough undersized chicken,
And milk that comes out of a can
The East is no region to stick in
For this one particular man.
I'm weary of curry and rice all
Commingled with highly spiced dope,
I'm weary of bathing with Lysol
And washing with carbolic soap.
I'm tired of itch skin diseases,
Mosquitoes and vermin and flies,
I'm fed up with tropical breezes
And sunshine that dazzles my eyes.
To eat without fear of infection,
To sleep without using a net,
And throw away all my collection of iodine, quinine, et cetera,
To know all the noise and the clamour
The hurry and fret of the West,
I'd trade all the Orient glamour
That damned lying Poots suggest.
They sing of the EAST as "enthralling,"
And that's why I started to roam,
But I hear the Occident calling—
Oh, Lord but I want to go home.

"WORDS & MUSIC"

Lois Moran's First Revue

The "Hunting" number of "Words and Music." Fox Movietone musical revue comes next week to the Queen's Theatre's audible screen, tells a delightful love story with all the glamour and descriptive beauty of a romance novel. The scene is laid in Britain in the hearty days of 1830. A young man is given a bachelor dinner by his comrades on the eve of his wedding. After a gay evening of song they call upon their honour guest to tell of his love romance.

He does so in a hauntingly sweet song, "Too Wonderful for Words." His bachelor friends ask the bridegroom-to-be how he ever met such a wonderful creature as he lyrically describes. The scene changes and we see the exterior of the Bishop and Hook, old British country inn.

Hunting dogs and villagers are in the courtyard, the hunt, apparently, just having ended. The hunters ride in and dismount. All is gay and colourful confusion. One of the young hunters dances for the crowd, and Boots and the maid also dance until the frisky old inn-keeper orders them to their work.

The post-chaise dashes up with a tooting of horns and barking of dogs. Ladies of fashion dismount. The bridegroom-to-be, one of the hunters, opens the door of the coach and a beautiful young lady steps out. She is looking for her uncle who is to meet her at the inn. The uncle fails to appear and the handsome young hunter makes the best of his opportunity, making love to the girl. She does not repulse his advance.

And that, he tells his bachelor friends, was the beginning. Lois Moran is the girl the bride-to-be, David Percy, the young lover, Dorothy Jordan, Broadway favourite, is a young huntress who dances, and Jac Wade and Muriel Gardner are Boots and the maid, respectively.

The number is colourfully and charmingly staged in settings that bear the stamp of historical authenticity. Dave Stamper, noted popular song writer, wrote the music, and Harlan Thompson, author of numerous musical comedies, provided the lyrics.

Patrons of the Queen's Theatre would do well to make their reservations early. Booking in advance may be made for the first half of this gala month.

COMEDY OF MARION DAVIES IN "MARIANNE" BRINGS STORM OF LAUGHS

When Marion Davies slips away and dons the uniform of a French officer in a hilarious scene in the all-talking, "Marianne", which opened yesterday at the Queen's Theatre, that's all we wanted to see to know that the picture will be cheered for her regiment of fans. For the minute this vivacious little comedienne is allowed to clown in masculine masquerade, that is all you need to evoke howls of delight. There is nobody who knows how to mimic quite like Miss Davies and certainly, nobody would care to see them if they did—at least not after seeing her effish performance in this new feature.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has given Miss Davies a perfect vehicle for her versatile talents in this new film and as the wistful little French mademoiselle who just can't help falling in love with an A.E.F. buck private she scores new triumphs. Her performance is splendidly balanced and her negotiation of the sudden descent from comedy to tragic drama is nothing short of perfect.

Lawrence Gray, New York musical comedy star, is seen opposite Miss Davies as the doughboy sweetheart and he achieves a sparkling characterization behind which a magnetic personality shines glowingly. George Baxter, as the blind French soldier who returns from war to find his sweetheart in love with an American doughboy, is touchingly convincing, especially where he realizes how he would hopelessly burden her and makes a noble sacrifice for her happiness.

Robert Z. Leonard directed the picture from an original story by Dale Van Every and Laurence Stallings and has done so with keen appreciation of the lighter moments as well as the stark episodes that come swiftly as a climax of potent dramatic suspense.

The supporting cast is particularly well chosen and includes such sterling players as Cliff Edwards, Benny Rubin, Emil Chautard, Scott Kolk, and others of note.

"TAMING OF THE SHREW" FAST-MOVING COMEDY

When a beautiful girl counters a legitimate proposal of marriage tendered by a handsome young man with such a statement as: "I'll see thee hanged," things are bound to happen. And happen they do in "Taming of the Shrew" which comes to the Queen's Theatre on Wednesday as the feature attraction and likewise brings Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks to the screen together for the first time.

From the opening shot to the final fadeout, "Taming of the Shrew" is just one long, glorious laugh. From the first moment gay but stubborn Petruchio (Douglas Fairbanks) pays eyes upon his bride to be, the stormy, tempestuous Katherine (Mary Pickford), there ensues a battle of wits and wills. Loving her fiery temper, and intrigued by her defiant remark: "I'll see thee hanged!" Petruchio sets about unceremoniously to tame the Shrew. To make things more complicated, he employs the very tactics that have won her the cognomen of "wildcat" throughout all of Italy. How she resists, and how the ultimate solution is worked out could only be told by Shakespeare.

In this screen story of the Bard's immortal comedy, brought to the screen for the first time in the history of motion pictures by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, every bit of essential dialogue, comedy and striking situation has been left intact throughout the production. This was accomplished by Sam Taylor, the man who directed "Taming of the Shrew" and, before that, "Coquette," which established Miss Pickford as one of the greatest emotional actresses the screen has ever seen. Taylor succeeded in retaining all the humanness which characterizes Shakespeare's works, and yet enhanced the scope of the play through the medium of the motion picture camera.

Critics who have seen the "Taming of the Shrew" hail it as an achievement in sound-recording, thanks to the innovations supplied by David Forrest, who was responsible for the microphone work on "Coquette."

Among the featured players who support the two stars in the comedy are Joseph Cawthorn, Clyde Cook, Dorothy Jordan, Geoffrey Wardwell and Edwin Maxwell.

Lawrence Gray, who shows that he has a splendid voice when he plays opposite Marion Davies in "Marianne", is to be given a chance by M.G.M. to play the lead in "The Song Writer," from the play by Crane Wilbur which Marshall Neilan will direct.

LON CHANEY

Remarkable Role In "Laugh
Clown, Laugh"

Lon Chaney, in his first clown role since his sensational success in "He Who Gets Slapped," comes to-day to the World Theatre, for the 5.15 and 9.20 performances till Tuesday, when he will appear as the central figure of Herbert Brenson's elaborate production, "Laugh, Clown Laugh." The play, adapted by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from the celebrated stage drama, sees Chaney starring in the role of the tragic clown made famous before the footlights by Lionel Barrymore.

The new picture is a vivid drama of backstage life of the theatre, with Chaney in the role of a clown who, for the happiness of the woman he loves, makes a great sacrifice.

"LOVE"

Based on Tolstoy's
Famous Novel

John Gilbert and Greta Garbo, who as a team scored one of the sensational successes of the year in "Flash and the Devil," and whose real-life romance immediately following furnished gossip for film fans the world over, appear again before the camera, for the first time since, in "Love," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's spectacular filmization of "Anna Karenina," Tolstoy's classic of Russia, which comes to the World Theatre on Wednesday.

The new picture, one of the most gorgeous and spectacular film romances of the season, presents both in roles that perhaps fit them better than any others that could be imagined.

Gilbert, splendidly uniformed, is seen as the debonair and romantic Count Vronsky, a role that recalls his great hit in "The Merry Widow," with Miss Garbo in the role of the tragic Anna, who sacrifices all for love, only to be dogged by a strange and sinister doom.

Edmund Goulding directed the new picture, which was staged on a lavish scale. The cast is notable, including George Fawcett, who played in "The Merry Widow" as the Grand Duke; Brandon Hurst as the husband, Count Karenin; Philippe De Lacy, Emily Fitzroy, and others of note.

Among the players are several interesting characters; Prince Youca Troubetzkoy, playing a staff officer; General Michael Pleschko, former Russian army commander, who fled from the revolution, and General Theodore Lodi, another Russian refugee, as generals on the Grand Duke's staff.

Spectacular reproductions of Russian castles, a great cathedral and other elaborate detail form a background for this vivid story of the love between a young count and the heroine of this vivid play. The picture is one of the most pretentious productions of the new season, and one of the most interesting screen dramas of years.

SIDE-SPLITTING COMEDY

Mary and Doug's Latest

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks are together on the screen for the first time in "Taming of the Shrew," the uproarious talking picture version of Shakespeare's comedy sensation which comes to the Queen's Theatre on Wednesday. Every line of dialogue used in the picture stands as written by the Bard himself.

As directed by Sam Taylor, maker of Harold Lloyd's greatest comedies including "Girl Shy" and "Safety Last," this tale of a lovely young spitfire tamed by a daredevilish young love-maker, is a deluge of laughs from start to finish. Doug storming through high society in a tramp outfit on his wedding day and with his bride bolting from the marriage feast in a driving rain are but two of a host of side-splitting situations.

A cast of stage notables appear in support of the stars.

HOLLYWOOD HAPPENINGS

Vilma Banky and Rod La Rocque are very emphatic when discussing the sacrifice of time and personal inclination that is demanded of film people. They are building a beautiful mountain lodge at Lake Arrowhead, you know, but work on her latest picture, "Sunkissed," has made it practically impossible for Mrs. La Rocque to devote any attention to their charming retreat, of late. Director Benstroom will promised her, however, that he will finish sometime in December. Ramon Novarro's smash in "The House of Troy," his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is twelve feet long and has to be put on by

"CASANOVA"

The Prince of Adventurers

Ivan Mosjukkine, who will be remembered for his excellent acting in "Michael Strogoff," is the leading player in "Casanova, The Prince of Adventurers" which will be shown to-day and to-morrow at the Star Theatre. The story, founded upon the life of one of the greatest lovers of all ages, is one of the most colourful romances ever adapted to the screen. From a wealth of material, the producer has built up a tale that brims over with the splendour of the courts of action. Ivan Mosjukkine fairly revels in the silken fascinations of the role of the great romantic lover.

Amid scenes that range from the beautiful waters of Venice to the Court of Catherine of Russia, the character finds the beautiful ladies of his heart's desire, and loves them exquisitely. "Casanova, The Prince of Adventurers" is more than a love story—it is a tale of adventure, full of exciting incidents, not the least being two thrilling sword duels, one of which is strongly reminiscent of Douglas Fairbanks.

When this picture was first shown in Paris it was hailed as a triumph for Europe. Wrote one critic: "We watched in astonishment this magnificent, incomparable film, splendidly mounted, an incontestable proof of the value of Continental films." Another said: "It is a film equal to the greatest and most artistic American productions. 'Casanova' has been mounted with unequalled magnificence. In the gorgeous settings, the massed scenes, and the lighting, the drama has attained a romantic splendour never before realised."

HILARITY THE RULE IN EVERY SCENE OF "THE NERVOUS WRECK"

Hilarity distinguishes "The Nervous Wreck." At Christie's latest laugh special featuring Harrison Ford, Phyllis Haver, Chester Conklin, Mack Swain and Hobart Bosworth, which will be on view at the Star Theatre next Tuesday.

Mr. Ford, well known romantic leading man, proved himself a fine comedian by his performance in "Up in Mabel's Room." This was one of Ford's first opportunities at comedy, and it is said it offered him only a small part of the comedy possibilities contained in the title role of "The Nervous Wreck."

Phyllis Haver, a graduate from the Sonnet comedy school, is one of the brightest feminine lights in the feature comedy field, and the names of Chester Conklin and Mack Swain are synonymous with laughter.

Scott Sidney, director of "The Nervous Wreck," has directed practically all of the Christie feature comedy hits, including "Charley's Aunt." The screen rights of "The Nervous Wreck," F. McGraw Willis, has likewise written the scripts for such Christie features as "Up in Mabel's Room" and "Charley's Aunt." The screen rights of "The Nervous Wreck" were purchased at heavy expense and against high pressure bidding. The picture conforms closely to the celebrated Owen Davis play, but presents the story on a far grander scale. The difficulty of presenting vast open plains, Arizona cattle ranches and boundless desert, met with in staging the play, was nothing to the Christie forces who actually produced the western force just as it was described in the original best seller by E. J. Rath.

NAGEL-MCAVOY IN CROOK HIT

May McAvoy playing a crook? Yes, my child, that is the newest role of this small patrician beauty in "Caught in the Fog," the Warner Bros' mystery comedy in which she and Conrad Nagel are co-stars.

After an unbroken succession of portrayals of characters of strict virtue and high social position, dainty May McAvoy steals aboard a millionaire's houseboat off the Florida coast with the intent of adding Charles Gerrard as a sleek bandit in, stealing a famous string of pearls. However—

Howard Brotherton directed "Caught in the Fog," which Charles Condon adapted from a story by Jerome Kingston. Mack Swain and Hugh Herbert, popular character comedians, portray a screaming team of amateur detectives, while Ruth Cherrington and Emil Chautard impersonate aged society crooks. "Caught in the Fog" comes to the Star Theatre next Thursday for a run of three days.

—HER LOVES
SHOCKED
THE WORLD!

It took over a year and cost over a million dollars to bring Helen and her playmates to the Screen. Hundreds of beautiful women — gorgeous clothes — dazzling pageants of breath-taking splendour — all woven into this sensational movie that has sent the critics searching for new words to describe it.

Commencing
THURSDAY.

Billie DOVE in THE HEART OF FOLLIES GIRL

BILLIE DOVE!

Star Outdoes Ancient Queen

Cleopatra, legend tells us, surrounded herself with beautiful women in order that her own superlative charm might outshine them. Now we have Billie Dove, star in First National Pictures, doing the same in films.

In "The Heart of a Follies Girl," which is to head the cinema bill at the Majestic Theatre, next Thursday, Miss Dove is supported by nearly fifty of Hollywood's youngest, prettiest, and most shapely dancing girls. They compose the chorus in scenes of the famous girl-show and take part in intimate back-stage scenes.

Then Mildred Harris, beautiful, blonde actress, and Clarissa Selwynne, have important supporting roles.

No one can say that Miss Dove is afraid of female competition! Although the star has some highly dramatic scenes, and must weep copiously in a few of them, she is beautiful in every foot of the film. In "The Heart of a Follies Girl," incidentally, she is gorgeously costumed. From her almost negligible Follies dancing gaily to her evening gowns and negligee, there is a grand display of a customer's part.

Larry Kent plays opposite Miss Dove in the picture, and Lowell Sherman does one of his best "villain" roles. A strong plot, adapted to the screen from Adela Rogers St. Johns' magazine story of the same title, makes "The Heart of a Follies Girl" a breathless entertainment.

There are 62 former newspaper men and women working in various departments in the production of motion pictures at the Paramount studios.

Of the 47 players under contract to Paramount in Hollywood, 31 have had stage training.

WHO WAS THE MAN

Wisest Vamp in History?

Savants, bon-vivants, and other gentlemen with a penchant for solving the mystery called woman, are vitally interested these days in determining exactly who, of the world's roster of famous vamps, was the man-wisest of them all. They have come to the conclusion, after months of involved research in the lore of feminine love, that the vamp who towers head and shoulders over all her sisters in the art of making the stronger sex weak is the renowned Helen of Troy.

Called the most beautiful woman that ever lived, Helen fascinated poets, dramatists, and authors from Homer, who made her the heroine of the great epics, to Professor John Erskine, who has just revealed her as the first modern flapper in his sensational novel, "The Private Life of Helen of Troy." Now even the movies have decided to immortalize the passionate romance between Helen and Paris in a screen version of Professor Erskine's celebrated work.

Fair Contenders

There are numerous fair contenders for the crown of love worn so laughably by Helen. Eve, for example, is called by many as the mother of all vamps by virtue of her being the first of her sex. She had many accomplishments in the vampish line which entitled her to hold the title. She vamped Adam out of a rib, then vamped an apple off the tree of life. Finally she vamped both Adam and herself out of the Garden of Eden, which succeeded in bringing them both down to earth and made a real man out of Adam, although he had strong objections at first to leaving Paradise, where he thought he was a permanent guest.

Queen of Sheba

knows, was King Solomon, who, with his wisdom and his thousand wives, was anything but an easy mark! But Sheba vamped him away from his wives and they had a great time together in Solomon's home-town where he had a big palace and plenty of entertainment. Sheba used to tell the wise old king that his love was "better than wine." As wine was highly thought of in those days instead of high-priced as in these, he was genuinely flattered. In return he told her: "Thou hast ravished my heart with one of thine eyes." Why Sheba, who is reputed to have had the most beautiful eyes in Egypt, should have used only one of them, and what might have happened to Solomon if she had utilised both, are mysteries which will not be solved until archaeologists unearth more information after this dazzling queen.

Cleo a Big-time Siren

If anyone was to ask the ghost of Marc Anthony for his opinion as to who was the world's greatest vamp, it is a safe bet to venture that he would have mentioned Cleopatra. Cleo was a big-time siren. She wouldn't consider anything less than a Roman General. Every morning she is said to have gargled a pearl dissolved in wine, finding it a great help against tooth-ache, although she had no objection to other Greeks.

To pass the time away while Marc was out on the field fighting the Nile, she used to float down the Nile. Ancient authorities credit her with catching a lot of curious fish in this way.

Cleo ordered General Anthony around like a private. Her power over him was so great that while Caesar was dining for him to return to Rome and get back into uniform, the vamp kept giving him banquets in a houseboat on the Nile, just to keep him mind off his work. Finally, in desperation, Caesar sent out his army to bring him back. Whereupon Anthony rose up in anger and undertook to send the army home again, with the through him and brought Cleo's power over him to an abrupt end. Cleo herself was so annoyed at Caesar's treatment of her boyfriend that she decided to poison herself. As she didn't care to endure much pain in this matter she tried various sorts of poison on her slaves, observing them carefully as they died to note the extent of their torment. After destroying a number of them she hit on the idea of poisoning herself with the sting of an asp, and is reported to have died with a smile on her lips and a few kind words for Anthony.

Ace Vamps Were Queens

A curious fact to note here is that five of the vamps were queens. These were Cleopatra, the Queen of Sheba, Du Barry, who, as Louis XV's favourite, was to all intents and purposes the queen, and Catherine the Great. The number is swelled to six if we include Eve, who is generally spoken of as the queen of the world.

With unlimited power over life and death Catherine vamped the Russian nation as it had never been vamped before or ever since. Her taste ran to he-men. It was dangerous for a man to gain the affection of Catherine, however, for the moment her love waned she had him executed. It is stated by eminent historians that only mid-winter were absolutely safe in Russia at the height of Catherine's reign.

But of the vamps of the ages, Helen of Troy, was the greatest. In beauty and cleverness she is called supreme. Her beauty was so brilliant that even blind Homer was able to see it. His epic concerning her immortal romance with Paris, Prince of Sparta, and the subsequent war between Menelaos, Helen's husband, and the Spartans, is still read by millions everywhere although it is 2,700 years old.

Helen's Facial Beauty

When Helen vamped a man, he stayed vamped! Menelaos was so enthralled by her beauty that, in spite of the fact that she eloped with Paris, he marshalled a tremendous fleet and went after her.

ference to this fact is well known. It was indeed Helen's face that "launched a thousand ships and burnt the topless towers of Ilium." How many other of history's famous sirens could boast of facial beauty sufficient to cause such a naval upheaval?

The famous Dr. Faust is reported to have thought nothing of bartering his soul to the devil for one of Helen's "immortal kisses" whereupon Satan conjured up the ghost of the beautiful queen for the love-sick philosopher. According to his description, Helen, when thus brought before him, was as ravishing as a ghost as she was in the flesh and Faust was wont to exclaim: "O, thou art fairer than the evening air clad in the beauty of a thousand stars!" Can history produce another woman whose beauty, even as a disembodied spirit, could elicit such a compliment from a man a thousand years her junior?

Helen's World Popularity

An indication of the tremendous popularity that Helen still holds over the world is attested by the gigantic sale of Professor Erskine's book and the intense interest which is being manifested over the new motion picture of her loves, titled also "The Private Life of Helen of Troy." Maria Corda, famous screen beauty, who enjoys the reputation of being the favourite film star in all Europe, essays the role of the immortal Helen. Those who have already seen the lovely film luminary say that she more than comes up to the dream of the "beautiful Queen of Troy," whose love affairs and private life are revealed for the first time to a generation which craves all the intimate details of a woman who is considered the man-wisest vamp in history!

George Marlon, Jun., titled 97 pictures in the two years he was under contract to Paramount before talking pictures enabled him

FLAPPER QUEEN

"Private Life of Helen of Troy"

Maria Corda, Hungarian Star, seen as Helen—Ricardo Cortez Plays Paris and Lewis Stone Fills Role of Menelaos—Other Stars in Support.

Maria Corda, Hungarian actress of both stage and screen, makes her bow to the Hong Kong public in one of the most striking roles in the history of picture.

The picture is "First National's" "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," the spectacular production which opens its engagement at the Majestic Theatre, Kowloon, to-day.

Miss Corda's performance as the most beautiful woman in literature and mythology is said to be an outstanding example of screen acting.

Possessed of striking beauty of classical type, Miss Corda is ideal as the immortal Helen, whose charm started the Trojan war and caused the downfall of that great nation of antiquity.

Formerly a dancer as well as an actress on both the stage and the screen, Miss Corda is fitted for the role in every particular.

"The Private Life of Helen of Troy" was produced for First National Pictures by Carey Wilson and directed by Alexander Korda. Lewis Stone, as Menelaos, and Ricardo Cortez, as Paris, head the cast with George Fawcett, Mario Carillo, Tom O'Brien, Alice White, Gus Portes, Bert Sprotte, and others in the supporting cast.

According to Charles B. Mintz, producer of the Krazy Kat cartoons, it requires 10,000 to 12,000 individual drawings to make one 600-foot cartoon.

Guy Oliver has worked steadily for Paramount since 1916 with only a verbal contract and is now play-

TWO BEAUTIES

Billie Dove & Mildred Harris

If a whole committee of beauty experts aren't wrong, two of the most beautiful women in motion pictures appear in First National's "The Heart of a Follies Girl," at the Majestic Theatre next Thursday.

The name of the star, Billie Dove, has become almost a synonym for feminine pulchritude. She has many times been named "the most beautiful woman on the screen." Mildred Harris, as a blonde type of womanly appeal, has won similar honours.

The star and Miss Harris appear in "The Heart of a Follies Girl" with fifty of Hollywood's most shapely young dancers. Larry Kent as hero, and Lowell Sherman as villain of the picture plot, are the fortunate gentlemen who appear with the beauties.

A nightgown was as necessary a part of a gentleman's wardrobe in ancient Greece, as are pyjamas today. At least Lewis Stone found it so for his role of Menelaos, in First National's "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," coming soon to the Majestic. Stone wears the nightgown in a humorous and quite typical domestic scene in the big production.

There are 1,500 regular employees at the Paramount studios in Hollywood, exclusive of actors.

The Paramount studios still receive letters from fans to Wallace Reid and Rudolph Valentino.

Ernst Lubitch is never seen without a cigar and consumes ten a day throughout the year.

After a thrilling finish, the first dead heat of the meeting was adjudged. Carrying 15 lbs. over weight for inches, President Hall (2nd in the Champions) hunted Boxing Eve up the straight and got on terms half way between the mile post and the Judge's box. They were locked together and fought it out stride for stride. Whereas President Hall was one of the three favourites, Boxing Eve was a rank outsider.

Royal Flush, after lying well back (in company with President Hall), snatched third place from Chesapeake Bay. Royal Flush and Wisdom Stag also carried much money.
Little Thunder showed out at the beginning but, with six furlongs to go, Boxing Eve was sent into the van, to lead by three lengths at the head of the straight. Mr. da Roza moved his mount up near the Black Rock and was a clear second a quarter of a mile from home. Then ensued the thrilling run in, with Royal Flush and Chesapeake Bay also in the picture, but unable to draw up.

BIG GAME HUNTS

With Car, Lasso, and Camera

Motor car, lasso and camera in place of high-powered rifles are coming into style as the popular diversion in staging big game hunts in Australia, according to C. S. Fletcher, Studebaker representative.

That this form of hunting is vastly more exciting and more sportsmanlike is pointed out in a letter from Mr. Fletcher, since the new form of hunt calls for release of the quarry uninjured after the catch. He describes the new fashion in hunting as follows:

"The scene of the hunt was thirty or forty miles outside the city of Leeton—right in the middle of the bush. For equipment we had two Erskine cars, a Sedan and a Tourer, a lasso and a camera to record the success of the day.

"After scouring the countryside for a couple of hours, we spied four emus. We singled out one and the chase was on in earnest. It scampered around through the undergrowth and over rough ground that forced us to travel between thirty-five and forty miles an hour. Finally the bird seemed satisfied that it could outrun the car and started across the plain. The going was horribly rough but by virtue of the absence of trees, the Erskine managed to gain rapidly.

The Humiliated Emu

"Capture was effected by 'Texan' Jack, who rode the running board of the careening car and tossed a lasso over the bird's head. The problem then arose of standing behind the emu while photographic evidence was taken. Emus are far more talented in kicking than the toughest mule. Unlike the mule, however, they kick forward instead of backwards and it must be admitted that they are very accurate shots. With the picture made, the humiliated, but uninjured emu was released."

Next on the programme was a kangaroo chase. After hours of cruising the hunters finally caught sight of a big fellow who seemed to offer everything that might be wished for in a specimen.

"We anticipated no trouble in landing him," Mr. Fletcher continues, "but he led us a very merry fifteen-mile chase before finally being captured. Although not classed as a ferocious animal, the kangaroo nevertheless has powerful weapons of defence. His forefeet are equipped with long and extremely sharp claws. With these he can grasp a dog or man in a vice-like grip and rip and tear most devastatingly with teeth and hind claws, while 'sitting' on his strong tail.

"One method of attack consisted of seizing the great tail and lifting it off the ground, whereupon the kangaroo was off balance and practically helpless. Even so, holding the tail is no job for a weakling and getting behind him to seize the tail no mean feat.

"The hunt continued and before the end of the day our bag consisted of five grown kangaroos, four baby kangaroos, one emu, one eagle, five ducks and one of the largest specimens of our most deadly snake—the black snake. The last named, incidentally, was not given the courtesy of release accorded our other captives.

"It might be mentioned that the hunt was so eminently successful," he concluded, "that one of the party posted a $250 challenge with a Leeton newspaper to any other party of similar size duplicating the feat with any other make of car than Erskine or Studebaker."

particularly advantageous position.

The 1930 programme calls for the operation of the factories at Toledo, Ohio; Elmira, N.Y.; Pontiac, Mich.; Los Angeles; Berlin and Manchester, on schedules which permit the highest efficiency and economy. At the same time, the resources of this immense manufacturing organization make it possible for Willys-Overland to speed up production at any time to meet unusual demands.

This eliminates the necessity faced by so many manufacturing companies of rushing production early in the year and building up a surplus, which may be left in the store rooms at the close of the year.

In the matter of distribution, the location of its various plants gives Willys-Overland another advantage, reducing costs of delivery and eliminating delays.

The main plant of the Willys-Overland Company at Toledo, Ohio, has a capacity of more than 2,000 cars a day. The Wilson Foundry and Machine Co. at Pontiac, Mich., where Willys-Knight motors are made and assembled, is one of the most complete and modern motor building plants in the world. Castings for all Willys-Overland cars are made here.

Transmissions and other parts for Willys-Overland cars are made in the Willys-Morrow, Inc. plant at Elmira, N.Y. A complete assembly plant at Los Angeles provides facilities for economical operations on the west coast.

Willys-Overland, Ltd., at Toronto, one of the most progressive of Canadian factories, is of major assistance in supplying the Canadian demand for Willys-Overland products.

Willys-Overland Crossley, Ltd., at Stockport, England, and the manufacturing plant at Berlin, provide cars for European distribution.

The first car ever to be in the Antarctic regions is an all-British baby model of the type that is proving indispensable in every part of the world. Sir Herbert Austin has received an enthusiastic wireless message from the Wilkins-Hearst Expedition at Deception Island, and the Byrd Expedition also included one of these "babies" in its equipment. This is a glowing tribute to British workmanship.

ROAD-RACING

Wash Speed Course
Proposals

SCHEME OUTLINED

The proposals for the ambitious scheme for building a vast speedway on the foreshore between Boston and Skegness have been taken a stage farther, and the sponsors, the newly-formed Automobile Racing Association, have high hopes of bringing the project to fruition.

Since Brooklands is no longer available for attempts on short-distance records, owing to an International ban, there is a very definite need for a suitable track in Britain.

A Fifteen-Mile Course

At present British motor cycle riders who wish to attack flying kilometre or flying mile records have to visit Arpaion, in France, and to add to the difficulties there is only one Arpaion meeting a year. For car drivers the position is worse still, since speedways have become so high that for attempts on the world's maximum speed record only such places as Daytona Beach, Florida, or Verneuk Pan, in Africa, are of use.

The first proposal of the Automobile Racing Association is, therefore, to build a straight course of 15 miles; this is to be at least 100 feet wide, absolutely flat, and to be surfaced with a non-skid material. But the scheme goes farther than this, and it is now proposed that there shall be a racing circuit as well. This T.T. track is to include part of the main track, and be completed by a loop road 45 ft. wide and eight miles in length. Various bends and corners will form part of the loop, so that true road conditions are obtained.

Other plans include the building of a motor-boat waterway a mile in length, a grandstand four miles long, to be situated along the middle section of the course, and an aerodrome. Roughly, 10,000 acres of the Wash will be reclaimed if the project is carried out, the width of the area being about a mile. Protection from the sea will be necessary along the whole length, and this will be obtained by means of a sea-bank faced with concrete.

From these details it will be seen that the project is extremely ambitious. Actually, an expenditure of at least £300,000 has been suggested as being necessary, and it may well prove extremely difficult to obtain so large a sum. But, apart from revenue derived from racing and record breaking by cars, motor cycles, and motor boats, there is the land reclaimed, and it is also proposed that the track should form a toll road between Skegness and Boston. At present the road between these towns is tortuous in the extreme.

The foreshore is at the moment controlled by the Board of Trade, the Duchy of Lancaster, and the Commissioners of Crown Lands, and it is understood that these bodies will be willing to meet the Automobile Racing Association in the matter so long as the rights of local residents are not violated.

There was an official enquiry into the proposals by the Board of Trade and the Ministry of Agriculture.

The Board of Trade Inquiry Mr. G. G. L. Du Cann, barrister, of London, who appeared on behalf of the Association promoting, outlined the scheme. He said the area was approximately fifteen miles in length, with an average width of three-quarters of a mile. The main speedway would be from twelve to fifteen miles long and 200 yards wide. It would be in a straight line, and perfectly flat; both sides would be fenced with concrete posts and wire. Down the centre would be a roadway 100 ft. wide, with return loop road about five miles long and 60 ft. wide. Access to the sea would be provided at suitable intervals by means of gateways.

Along four miles of the speedway would be a spectator's stand 30 ft. wide, which would be in the form of a raised platform, partially roofed in. The track would be protected from the tide by a huge sea wall. The racing tracks available did not provide scientific data, and the present one would supply that deficiency and meet all requirements.

The local authorities and private owners who had put forward objections had not done so in opposition to the scheme, but to preserve their rights on the foreshore in the matter of drainage and so on. The Association believed they would be able to meet those objections satisfactorily.

Earl Howe, one of the directors, gave evidence on behalf of the Association and also as president of the Marine Motor Association. He estimated that two thousand men would be employed if the scheme were carried out, and that the work would take about two years.

Captain Malcolm Campbell said he had been searching all over the country for a suitable speed track and he was satisfied that the one proposed would fulfil all requirements. In fact, it would be the most ideal track in the world, and make the Lincolnshire district the Mecca for all speed events. Capt. Campbell said he was convinced of the practicability of the scheme.

Ideal Testing Ground

Captain W. Barnato, another director of the Association, said there was no place at present where car manufacturers could test out their products, and from that point of view the project was a very desirable one. To those who might say, "What was the use of a racing track?" he would reply that it helped towards what he described as road worthiness.

A considerable amount of additional evidence was given in support of the scheme, amongst others by the Clerk to the Holland (Lincolnshire) County Council, the Mayor of Boston, who spoke for the Borough Council, and the chairman of the Skegness Urban District Council, all of whom spoke of the benefits which would accrue.

Mr. F. W. Dennis, a well-known Lincolnshire agriculturist, raised the question of whether, in connection with the construction work, agricultural labourers would be attracted, and in that way agriculture might suffer.

Mr. J. H. Hutchinson, a member of a big engineering firm, who gave evidence as to the roads, said he did not think agriculture would suffer in the way mentioned. The men required for the work would be unskilled, and the contractors would also bring along with them a large body of men, and there need be no fears for agriculture.

The view of the Board was that by electing to proceed on a non-statutory basis, the Association must come to terms with the people affected by the scheme. If they were unable to do so the Board would have to get into consultation with the Ministry of Agriculture to consider whether the outstanding objections would prevent the Board from giving consent. If there was any doubt the promoters would be told they must go to Parliament in order to obtain powers to carry the thing through. There was really no serious opposition, and the Inspector will report in due course.

Strong with the strength of steel

Beneath the beauty of the Dodge Six is strength—the resilient strength that is inherent in steel. Under the sparkling finish and the luxurious upholstery is the all-metal Mono-Piece Body, welded so that it is virtually one piece of steel, anchored inflexibly to the chassis. Elimination of body sills, lowering the center of gravity, and use of a rigid eight-inch frame are factors of safety in this unit construction. PONTIAC'S LONG LIFE STORY*

SOME INVENTIONS

Progress in Transport Methods

In his lecture to the Engineering Society of the Hong Kong University, Professor Middleton Smith said:

Simplicity in a hall-mark of good invention. Within limits, any clever mechanic can devise a machine to do anything, provided you do not mind it being complicated and costly. The genius comes along and does the same thing in a simple manner. Every body then says "Why didn't I think of that myself?"

It may be as well to emphasize the beauty of simplicity. Take a case noticeable on the railway. The early experimenters with the steam locomotive believed that in order to pull a load, the rails must have teeth and the engine a toothed wheel to work in them. The genius showed that smooth wheels can grip, and run on, smooth rails. We admit that the motor car of today is far too complicated a machine. Thousands of engineers are at work trying to invent simpler methods of power transmission etc.

Fundamental Inventions
The wheel was probably the first great invention. At any rate it was the first effort to improve transport. Nearly all great inventions are for the purpose of conveying motion from one place to another; or to convert form to another; or else to change the direction or speed of motion.

Every man on a bicycle illustrates how we can change up and down, or rectifying motion, into rotary motion. His knees move up and down, and the lower parts of his legs act as connecting rods to connect his knees with the cranks on his cycle. So the up and down motion of his knees is changed into the rotary motion of the wheel.

James Watt applied this idea to the steam engine; and the up and down motion of the piston is changed by means of a connecting rod and crank to drive the shaft round and round. This happens daily in millions of motor cars. The up and down motion of the piston causes the rear wheel of the car to rotate and these wheels push the car forward.

In the ordinary sewing machine the reverse takes place. The part which holds the needle takes its up and down motion from a wheel which is turned by hand or an electric motor.

A CITY OF CONTRASTS

"Bangkok, the capital of Siam, is a city of amazing contrasts," writes Major C. Lestock Reid in the February Wide World Magazine. "In its crowded, brilliant-coloured streets, the latest Rolls-Royce crawls along behind the most primitive bullock-cart, and police and soldiers in ultra-modern and very Germanic uniforms (save for the Royal Guard) rub shoulders with civilians clad in the most primitive of Eastern robes."

"You can take a taxi and find it a much better and more powerful car than those that ply for hire in London or Paris; but the drivers are so incredibly ignorant that they have to be directed street by street, even if your destination is the Royal Palace itself!"

"If you don't care for a taxi you can have a riksha—probably the earliest form of wheeled transport—and direct the coolie (always presuming you know the way yourself) by the simple process of saying: 'Right,' 'Left,' or 'Straight on' at cross-roads. Always presupposing that you survive the dangers of those cross-roads—a bit of a toss-up in that water of unregulated traffic—you can be comfortably assured that the coolie will go the correct way, for he has one shaft of the riksha pointed so that he can tell right from left!"

Criminals and felons can be apprehended under certain circumstances by the imprint of their automobile tyres (says the Scientific American). From a scientific study of the tyre imprint and comparisons with marks on record in the Sheriff's office, it is possible to determine the make and size of the tyre, which wheel it is on, and the approximate type, load, and speed of the suspected car at the time the felony was committed. When suspicious-looking tyre marks are discovered near the scene of a crime, a try-square is placed on the ground beside the marks, and measurements and photographs are taken. These data are compared with office records of the 460 different kinds of tyre-tread patterns now in use. After determining the make, size, and position of the suspected tyre, officers watch for cars having the distinguishing tyre or tyres. By means of the new system of identification, several professional chicken thieves were apprehended recently near Los Angeles. When confronted with the unexpected circumstantial evidence against them, the thieves confessed, and were sentenced.

TAXI-CAB CRISIS

Singular Situation in Paris

Paris, Jan. 20.

A singular situation has arisen in connection with the recent increase in taxi-cab fares. Two thousand of the small owners of cabs, finding that they cannot obtain a sufficient number of fares and that their takings have been reduced by 50 per cent., are talking of selling their vehicles. Other drivers are discussing the advisability of ignoring the new tariff and of accepting lower fares, in the hope of winning back clients.

There are 18,000 taxi-cabs on the streets of Paris, and one of the big companies is on the eve of putting 2,000 more vehicles into circulation. In spite of the fact that things are not going well, there is also talk of building large garages and of the Municipal Council ultimately buying up the taxi-cab company. These rumours have served to reopen the flood-gates of opposition against the Municipal Council, for if this new enterprise is started, it will be the ratepayers who will have to pay.

All this trouble has arisen through the abolition of the famous green card delivered to the drivers of motor vehicles when they passed through the gates of Paris, and handed back when they returned and paid a tax on any extra petrol in their tank. Another cause of the trouble is the increase of taxi-cab fares to a point at which the cabs cannot compete with the omnibus and tram-car services which the Municipal Council controls.

AGRICULTURE

Hit by Home Traffic Bill

"There is no doubt that the speed-limit proposals for commercial vehicles, if put into practice, will affect agriculture very badly. Two sections of the industry in which speed is of the utmost importance are," states The Commercial Motor, "milk production and market gardening."

"All vegetables, to be at their best and to realise the highest prices, must be of first-class quality and this is quite impossible unless the produce can be delivered to the shops early enough in the morning to be used on the table the same day."

"The early-morning delivery is very important during the season of the soft fruits—cherries, strawberries, currants, etc. The longer these fruits are kept in the packages after picking the more freshness and quality are lost, whilst the longer they are on the road the worse becomes their condition."

"Then as regards milk the position is of even more importance. Milk must be delivered fresh and these proposed restrictions will deprive the public, to a considerable extent, of the very elaborate system that has been built up for delivering milk quickly and in a fresh condition. There are other branches of the industry that will suffer and generally it can be accepted that the proposed restrictions will mean an economic blow for the whole industry."

RAIL VERSUS ROAD

What Enthusiasts Foresee

Enthusiasts for road transport profess to foresee the day when our railways will be converted into motor tracks, but it is much more likely that they will be restored to their legitimate function as carriers for all long-distance traffic other than that of an exceptional nature, such as goods too bulky to be transported by rail.

No arbitrary definition can be given of long-distance traffic, but given effective regulation of road undertakings, it is probable that, in general, either goods or passengers can be more conveniently and economically carried by rail over distances much in excess of fifty miles. So far as passengers are concerned, greater distance road tend to become both slow and tedious as compared with rail travel. The matter is on a different footing as regards goods transport, as in this case a balance must be struck between economy and speed. It may be admitted that at the present time, goods can often be carried more than twice the stated distance both more cheaply and expeditiously by road than by rail, but, on the whole, the tendency is for the cost of road transport to increase, and that of rail transport to decrease, and we believe that the railways are now fully alive to the importance of eliminating vexatious delays by speeding up both collection and delivery, and the elimination so far as possible of idle time at depots.

If we are correct in our surmise, the proper function of road traffic becomes that of acting as a feeder for long-distance rail traffic, and providing local services up to distances of about fifty miles, particularly in the direction of cross-country runs. Such a programme leaves ample scope not only for the existing road carriers, but adequate provision for expansion.—Engineering.

MOTOR MILLIONS

How British Industry Grows

For every motor car produced in 1907, British factories produce 18 to-day at prices which, on an average, are 50 per cent. below the pre-war level. These and other striking facts are set out in a booklet entitled "Pride of Achievement," which has been produced by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders (British Manufacturers' Section).

It announces the start of an extensive campaign to regain the overseas markets that were lost as a result of the war, and tells the history of the remarkable progress made by the British motor industry at home during the last 30 years in face of many difficulties and fierce competition.

Links in the Chain

The British section of the society has opened offices in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa as first links in a chain that is to connect world markets with the British factories.

During the first eight months in 1929 Britain exported motor vehicles, chassis and parts to the value of £7,000,000—an increase of over 25 per cent. on the corresponding period last year.

In 1913 states the booklet, Britain had just commenced to develop overseas markets, and had exported 9,000 cars that year, when the resources of the industry were turned to the manufacture of lorries and tanks for the war, and the export trade was strangled.

"The stage is now set for an era of expansion throughout the world," continues the booklet. "British manufacturers were never more determined to do their best, not only for the welfare of the industry, but in order that they may play their part in maintaining British commercial prestige."

Growth at Home

The growth of the industry at home is illustrated by some remarkable figures.

In 1900 there were only 3,000 motor vehicles—including private cars, cabs and commercial vehicles—on the roads of Britain. As a result of a 1,000-mile tour of motor cars throughout the country, organised by the Automobile Club (now the Royal Automobile Club), the number of motors multiplied over sevenfold in five years, jumping to 23,000.

This year Britain has reached a record output of 215,000 motor vehicles and the industry employs, directly and indirectly, close on half a million men and women.

ANDES CROSSED

A British Six-Wheeler's Feat

In establishing transportation by motor vehicle across the Andes, between the city of Riobamba and the town of Guaranda, the government of Ecuador had a problem to solve, says Motor Transport. For centuries the only means of transport were llamas, mules, donkeys and horses. At a cost of £5,000 for the 60 kilometres, the mountain road was widened a few feet. The gradients were not altered, and hairpin bends still exist in an acute form, but here and there bridges were provided by the expenditure of a little masonry, and now the old pack trail is a motor road!

12 Passengers and ½-Ton

Without success several trucks were tried over this road until the Morris-Commercial, by the orders of the Director-General of Public Works, who had extensive tests of the truck carried out in the presence of important witnesses, tackled the problem of maintaining a service, and made a trip without a stop or hitch occurring. As the outcome of this performance, the Morris takes twelve passengers and half a ton of goods nearly every trip, with safety and regularity whatever the weather conditions, and without having recourse to the use of chain trucks over the mountain road.

Including stops, the average time taken for the trip is five hours, as compared with twenty-four hours taken by mule or horse transport. As previously stated, the distance is only 60 kilometres, but the gradients are so severe that they must be allowed for when considering the time taken. Under these trying conditions the Morris engine did not overheat or stall, whilst the brakes were used very little, the descents being negotiated with the engine acting as a brake. No skidding or slide-slip was experienced. At the bends in the roads, where the gradients are usually most severe, it was found necessary to shut backwheels in order to get round. Under these conditions the hand brake held properly, and there was no difficulty in restarting.

From the foregoing it is apparent that the Morris-Commercial six-wheeler has gone to Ecuador to stay and, for these mountain services, it is said that no other vehicle can do better.

"SKIDDING"

Views of Professor Low

"A particularly interesting point has been omitted," writes Professor Low in the Motor, "suggesting that rather much attention may be paid to the argument which demands a low centre of gravity to avoid skidding."

"The tendency of any car to fly outwards is hardly affected by its general height from the ground and I think it might be assumed that lifting of the inner wheels would not directly decrease the grip upon the surface average of all four wheels of the car. The immediate effect of the movement might well be to increase any tendency possessed by the inner wheels slightly to penetrate the surface, and if this alone affected the skid the position of the centre of gravity would have no very great effect."

"I am inclined to believe that many people do not mind a skid if it is reasonably controllable and that it is the 'biting skid' which is so alarming when produced by the wheels striking some obstruction. I have often noticed that a very smooth stone on a perfectly smooth greasy surface will cause much unpleasantness and I consider that this is the reason for the benefits obtained from a low-built car in relation to its cornering powers."

"As the vehicle is lifted by the stone it is nearly always given a sharp blow which tends to push it away from its normal course. Upon landing again there is a natural bounce attributable to the impossibility of absorbing shocks by means of the average spring, and the net result is that the car is thrown sideways at a moment when none of the wheels is best situated to grip the surface. Obviously a high-built car will tend to greater rocking when the wheels are gripping in an irregular manner."

U.S.A. MOVE

Roads Over Railways

In the early months of last year The Commercial Motor published details of a comprehensive scheme for building roads above the railways. This aroused enormous interest, extracts, often accompanied by illustrations, being reproduced in some 30 papers throughout the country, whilst the article gave rise to considerable comment overseas. The main suggestion was to overcome the increasing congestion on the main exits from the Metropolis by carrying relief roads for a few miles over the railways, when they could rejoin existing trunk roads, or, later on, might be extended to become important routes.

The Commercial Motor pointed out that it was quite aware of the many difficulties, but that these were not insuperable, and that it looked upon the matter of relieving congestion as being one that required drastic treatment if semi-paralysis is not to occur in the near future.

The seeds which were sown may have fallen on barren ground in Britain, but apparently, not so in America, for the Grand Trunk Western Co. has just announced a plan to build an elevated motor road above its right of way from Detroit to Pontiac, Michigan, subject to the approval of the City Council and the Public Utilities Commission of Michigan.

The elevated road will be designed to accommodate four lines of motor traffic, the inner ones for cars travelling at high speed, and those at the outside for vehicles moving comparatively slowly. It is intended to charge a toll to users to amortize the cost of construction and maintenance.

The importance of this move can be realised when consideration is given to the distance between the terminal points, this being 22 miles, which is greater than the total length required over our four great railways to alleviate traffic conditions in the Metropolitan area.

A LIMIT Motor-Bus & Cut-Throat Competition

John Stuart Mill is now out of fashion, but the statement in his classic essay on Liberty that "there is a limit to the legitimate interference of collective opinion with individual independence" remains as true to-day as when it was written. We imagine, however, that few people would now agree that the sole end for which mankind are warranted in interfering with the liberty of action of any of their number is to prevent harm to others. One of the more important proposals for the amelioration of industrial depression, the co-ordination of transport, for example, could hardly be defended on the grounds that it does no harm to others, while it unquestionably constitutes a decided interference of collective opinion with individual independence.

One of the mischievous tendencies of the last few years has been the mushroom growth of road transport agencies, which, while proving a serious embarrassment to the railways, have only served to deplete the public about what constitutes an economic rate of transport. In the boom years of 1927-28, many small companies were formed to operate road passenger services, and these companies succeeded in diverting a large amount of traffic from the railways, partly by affording a novel means of travel, but mainly by offering to convey their passengers at fares markedly below the current rate by rail.

These companies enjoyed several fortuitous advantages, as, apart from the fact that they were only called upon to pay a relatively small proportion of the cost of road maintenance, they were at liberty in many areas to select the most profitable, while ignoring unremunerative services, and to employ relatively unskilled, and consequently low-paid labour, entirely at their own discretion. Finally, no effective measures were in existence to ensure that the vehicles which they employed were either suitable or safe for the services.

In spite of these advantages, however, it is an open secret that many of these companies are now faced with the alternatives of either ceasing their activities or substantially increasing their fares. There can be little question, therefore, that the coup de grace will be given to the continued existence of uneconomic road transport by the implementation of the new Transport Act. There is no reasonable doubt that this Act will pass on to the Statute-book in due course, and it includes measures for removing all the anomalies to which reference has been made, other than increased liability on the part of road-transport undertakings for the upkeep of the roads over which they run. To the credit of the larger companies, it may be said that they have taken every precaution to ensure the reasonable comfort and safety of their passengers, and the fair treatment of their staff, and they have only run at uneconomic rates when they were forced to do so by unfair competition. The position of these companies in the future is of considerable interest to the public—Engineering.

RAIL MOTOR CARS. Satisfactory Progress Reported

The abundant water power available in Italy renders railway electrification in that country a particularly attractive proposition, and the conversion from steam to electrical operation is being rapidly pushed forward on all the main lines. There are certain districts, however, where the traffic conditions hardly justify such conversion, and in these areas, experimental services have been run for some time with locomotives driven by heavy-oil engines, or with rail cars having similar motive units. The first locomotive of this type, which was put into service four years ago in southern Italy, was built at the

"RULES OF THE ROAD"

The following quaint "Rules of the Road" are enforced in Seoul, Korea—

1. At the rise of the hand of the police, stop rapidly.
2. Do not pass him by or otherwise disrespect him.
3. When a passenger of the foot hove in sight, tootle the horn; trumpet at him melodiously at first, but if he still obstructs your passage, tootle him with vigour and express by word of mouth the warning "Hail Hail!"
4. Beware of the wandering horse that he shall not take fright as you pass him by. Do not explode box at him. Go something by.
5. Give big space to the festive dog that shall sport in the roadway.
6. Avoid entanglement of dog with your wheel spokes.
7. Go soothingly on the grease mud, as there lurks the sidd demon.
8. Press the brake of the foot as you roll round the corner to save the collapse and tie up.
9. When you meet the cow and horse go silently to the side of the road and wait until he passes away.

Stabilimento Grandi Motori of the F.I.A.T. Company, at Turin. The locomotive incorporated a full Diesel engine of the company's submarine type, and was fitted with electric transmission. The engine operated on the two-stroke cycle, and had six cylinders developing a total of 450 brake horse-power, at a crankshaft speed of 500 r.p.m. This locomotive is still running, and has operated quite successfully throughout its four years of service.

Following on this, the Italian State Railways ordered four rail-cars from the same company. These rail-cars were also fitted with electric transmission, but instead of a two-stroke Diesel engine, four-cycle airless-injection engines were employed for the power unit. These engines were again of the six-cylinder type, developing 200 brake horse-power at 750 r.p.m. The first of these rail-cars was put into service early in 1928, and the second later, while the remaining two have just been completed. The two cars in service are reported to have given every satisfaction to date.—Engineering.

WELDING Remarkable Method of Manufacture

Among those whose knowledge of Ford methods is derived from articles in the Press and magazines, it is often imagined that the outstanding point of interest in Ford factories is production in very large number due to the elimination of waste motion and to the use of the most modern machines, tools and fixtures and manufacturing methods that unlimited resources and years of conscientious effort have been able to produce.

The company, however, never depends upon accelerated individual effort for its production. To the trained observer a production of over 9,000 cars and trucks a day, averaging 2,000,000 finished jobs a year, is less remarkable than the smooth unhurried precision with which it is done. One never notices any confusion in a Ford factory. Many new processes are employed, some of them epochal of their kind, and these given the new Ford the remarkable combination of quality and strength that have aroused so much world comment.

A Wonder Tale
A very striking example of this "difference" in Ford methods provides the subject of this article. The age-old task of welding, first practised by the blacksmith, has been developed in a way that can justly be claimed to provide a wonder tale of modern industry. In the production of the new Ford, welding has been turned into the keystone of a new manufacturing method, and the Ford works have been transformed into the world's greatest welding laboratories.

The practical result of this achievement is that forgings and stampings can be united into integral parts of strength, lightness and beauty at a speed unequalled hitherto. The important outcome is a motor-car in which no castings are used except in the cylinder block, which like other cylinder blocks, is made of cast iron.

Welding in the Ford factories is the transformation of two pieces of metal into one solid piece. In order to apply welding so extensively and efficiently to the new Ford car, it was necessary to adopt methods that would seem almost revolutionary in some plants. In many instances machines had to be designed that were radically different from any in existence, and tools and fixtures never before heard of were made.

Perfect Results Secured
The results, however, have more than justified expectations. The process has helped to make the new car at the same time one of the most economical and sturdiest ever manufactured.

Destructive tests have shown in a remarkable way the enormous strength of the metal at the point welded—proving, in fact, that the point of weld is the strongest of all. The new Ford Model "A" chassis has over 150 forgings, 390 electric butt welding and 300 spot welding operations. 90 per cent. of all its steel parts are forgings.

The whole car, in fact, may be described as a welding design, and this affords one of the outstanding reasons for its strength, beauty, lightness and speed.

MOTOR NEWS from Road & Showroom

Fire Engine's Motor "Baby"

The latest motor novelty is a tiny fire tender, with a truck of 3 feet 6 inches, designed to dash to a fire before it is possible to get a big engine under way. It has been produced by Sir William Morris, the British motor manufacturer, and it can rush to the scene of action at fifty miles an hour on an 8 h.p. engine. The tender is fitted with a 23 feet sectional ladder, an axe, a first-aid outfit, reinforced Dunlop tyres, and twelve large fire extinguishers to make it independent of a water supply. There are seats for two firemen.

More than 550,000 tests are conducted yearly in Studebaker's engineering and research laboratories, in addition to the hundreds of inspections made on every car in process of manufacture.

An Eskimo Six recently carried the first white woman into the Vornek Pan, a barren territory in the African Transvaal, several days' journey from Johannesburg.

New Studebaker touring cars shipped to Tientsin for delivery to Kalgan, Mongolia, had to be driven over lofty Nankow pass and through the ice packed Lo Lung Bei river in order to reach their new owners.

Reverse gear, rather than a forward speed, is the first to be used when the cars come off Studebaker assembly lines. The cars move down the line backwards, and are backed off the line under their own power.

Exports of Studebaker Commanders and Presidents during the first six months of last year showed an increase of nearly 173 per cent. over the same period in 1928.

A stock President Eight recently negotiated far-famed Kurrajong Heights, in New South Wales, in top gear in an officially certified test run. Kurrajong Heights—a 4-1/2 mile grind—is rated as one of the steepest climbs in the world.

Dodging wild game at 70 miles an hour on Indian roads and crossing rivers on railway trestles were among the incidents of a cross country run in which a Studebaker President Eight Roadster set a new road record between Calcutta and Bombay.

A Test for Bus Drivers

To test the mental agility of bus drivers, the Paris police department now employs the "perceptual-motor," an invention of Professor Emilio Mira, of Barcelona, Spain, which measures the ability of a driver to judge the speed of approaching vehicles.

In the examination, the bus driver-to-be is seated fifteen feet away from a table on which is arranged an apparatus consisting of three rods rigged up with pulleys and a rheostat. The rods can be moved at varying speeds in different directions. If the driver can discern quickly and accurately when the rods are to meet, it is assumed that he can make accurate estimates in the larger field of real traffic.

Dutch Ford Co.'s Profit

The Dutch Ford Company has published its first annual report, which shows a gross profit of 3,730,000 florins on a share capital of 5,000,000 florins and a net profit of 1,860,000 florins. A dividend of 10 per cent. is declared. The dividend caused disappointment, since 20 per cent. was expected.

Careless Drivers

The Automobile Association has been requested to draw attention to the frequency of accidents on the Kingston by-pass road, particularly as in some instances it is clear that the accidents have been the result of failure on the part of drivers to exercise the necessary caution at road junctions, where other road users desire to enter, cross, or leave the road.

At the suggestion of the A.A., additional signs are being erected by the county surveyor of Surrey close to these crossings, and motorists are particularly requested, in the interests of public safety, strictly to observe the warnings conveyed by these signs.

Prospects for Industry

The prospects of a further real advance of the British motor industry for 1930 are not very encouraging. In 1929 the industry, as a whole, reached a very high level of activity. Much of this was no doubt soundly based, but in the private car section particularly, it is difficult to say how far sales were stimulated by the prevalent speculative boom psychology. If to any great extent, a corresponding reaction may be expected in 1930. The basic competitive position is certain to be keener than ever before, both at home and abroad.

Drink and Driving

"The mere fact that he had had a drop of beer does not make him in the slightest degree incapable of driving," said Mr. Justice Branson in a motor case. "The position in point," replied the defending lawyer, "is that a man who has been having some drink will not drive a car in the same way as one who has had nothing at all." To this the Judge responded, "It depends on how much he has had."

The view of the medical profession, as far as it can be ascertained, is that complete abstinence is best for those about to drive, but there is agreement that much depends on the individual and his reaction to alcohol. Teetotal chauffeurs find it easier than the others to obtain employment.

"Menace to Hunting"

In an appeal to followers of the Wynnstay Hunt, Sir Watkins Williams Wynn, the Master, declares that the increasing use of motor-cars and motor horse-boxes is a menace to the welfare of hunting.

The authorities have complained, he states, that the roads are being blocked by cars, and he asks that all those who come out with the hounds will do their utmost to mitigate these modern but very serious difficulties in connection with hunting.

Saved Girl's Life

The inflated inner tube from a Ford car was the means of saving the life of a sixteen-year-old girl, Hilda Dibb, of Victoria, British Columbia, when she was overcome with a cramp while swimming near her home. Violet Brooks, a companion, seeing her predicament, started to her aid with the inner tube. With this supporting the unfortunate girl, she managed to kick her way back to shore.

Motor Cyclists & Insurance

"Why cannot the insurance companies realise that to class machines together according to capacity makes a policy an absurdity for a great many riders?" asks a writer in Motor Cycling, referring to the present custom of basing insurance rates on engine capacity. He suggests that it is time that insurance companies realised that "there is as much difference between one 350 and another as there is between a Carnarvon and an innkeeper of a home for suffering from incurable fatal disease."

For Warmer Weather

With the advent of warmer weather, motorists are already looking forward to making week-end trips to the country or seaside. Perhaps only a few give any real thought to the requirements of their cars to carry them over long trips, and where there is no forthright, if trouble is experienced over the journey, the motorist is inclined to lay blame on the car. Like any other piece of machinery, however, the motor car requires certain care and attention at definitely fixed intervals, and given this care, the reliability built into it is at all times assured. The amount of labour to care properly for a car is not great, it is in fact far less than might at first be thought. Even so small a period as one hour a week of conscientious, intelligent effort by the owner, will secure the results he desires, and can have. A short period of each week-end should be given to care and attention to the car.

British Cars for the Prince

British Cars are being used by the Prince of Wales during his tour in Africa. For this occasion the head of a well-known British firm producing six- and eight-cylinder cars arranged that samples of his product should be available, and the Prince agreed to use them.

Lubrication

Lack of sufficient lubrication must be guarded against. Oil and grease are cheaper than repair bills, and it is most desirable that owners study their instruction book and go over all parts requiring lubrication, as shown on the chart. Especially so is this important before making long trips, as very often a point which has recently been oiled may become dry. Check oil in the crankcase, gear box, and differential, and if not up to the specified mark, replenish.

Go to Halifax!

Road-widening schemes to cost nearly £40,000 have been approved by the Halifax authorities.

Cooling System

The proper amount of water in the cooling system is equally as important as the supply of petrol and oil, and, if neglected, will result in over heating of the engine and perhaps damage to internal parts. The system should be examined regularly, and, if necessary, water added to bring it to the proper level. Once a month, the radiator drain cock, which is conveniently located on the right side at the bottom of the radiator, should be opened and all the water and accumulated dirt run out.

Flush the Radiator

If the water is very dirty the radiator should be flushed out with a solution of washing soda, about one tablespoon to the gallon, and, after draining the mixture, again flushed with clean fresh water to ensure that no trace of the mixture is left in the system. On a long trip, especially when the travelling has been over hilly roads or those with a loose top surface where hard pulling is experienced, examine the water supply frequently and each time a stop is made for petrol or oil. Never pour cold water into a radiator or cooling system while the motor is hot, as it may crack the cylinder head.

FORD PLANES

New Tri-Motored Type

A new tri-motored, all metal transport aeroplane to be known as the 7-AT type is announced by the Ford Motor Company.

In appearance the new ship will be virtually the same as the 5-AT type, production of which will be continued. The actual dimensions of the 7-AT will follow very closely those of the 5-AT, which has won widespread recognition among professional airmen and air travellers by its performance.

The most essential difference in the latest addition to the Ford air transport line is the substitution of two Wright J-6 motors of 300 horsepower each for two of the three Pratt and Whitney Wasps which power the 5-AT. The new motor, however, will be a 425 horsepower Wasp, which with the two wing motors will produce 1,055 horsepower. Marked economy of operation is gained by the new arrangement of motors.

The 7-AT type has a wing spread of approximately 78 feet and a length of about 60 feet overall. Its wing area is 835 feet and its height a trifle more than thirteen and a half feet.

The new craft will give a top speed of 134 miles an hour, and its cruising speed is 112 miles an hour. The stalling speed is 63 miles per hour. The radius of action is 625 miles. It has a service ceiling of 14,000 feet—about the height of Mount Ranier, and an absolute ceiling of 15,600, or only 240 feet less than three miles.

The ship can carry a useful load of 5,630 pounds, bringing its total weight, fully loaded, to 12,910 pounds. It can carry 281 gallons of gasoline and 26 gallons of oil.

The average width of the cabin is four and a half feet and the average height six feet. The length is a trifle less than 19 feet. Fifteen persons, including the pilot and co-pilot, can be carried. Baggage space has been provided.

New and unusually attractive exterior finishes, such as that shown on the Ford demonstration plane at last year's aviation shows, are available.

One of the features of Ford aeroplane-cabins is the "Ply metal" interior trim, developed to Ford specifications, and consisting of two thicknesses of duralumin with a score of balsa wood, the latter acting to deaden the noise of the motors.

The cabin is fitted with every convenience for passengers, with roomy, leather-upholstered aluminium chairs, adjustable to three positions, dome lights, individual bracket lights, a wash room, individual windows and interior furnishings that give the cabin a tone of quiet richness, but with an emphatic note of cheerfulness.

The transport has many features of high importance in the interest of safety, which have made the Ford ships particularly appealing to the public. These include reduction of fire hazards, precautions in locating the fuel tanks and the gauging of strength of every part.

Ford planes are employed by many of the best known passenger air line in America and also by a number of business companies desiring the advantages of their own air transportation as well as the attendant advertising value.

In addition to the 7-AT and 5-AT, production of the 4-AT powered by three Wright J-6 motors, and the 6-AT, equipped with pontoons for landing on water, will be continued.

MOTOR-CAR CARRIER

Freight Steamer Fitted With Lifts

The Tyne Dock Engineering Co. have accomplished an interesting job in converting the Dovenden, formerly the Howick Hall, into a transporter for carrying cargoes of assembled motor-cars, with elevators to carry the cars from the upper to the lower decks.

"The vessel, which has a gross tonnage of 5,096, was built at Glasgow in 1910, for the United States Steel Products Co., and her conversion is understood to be the first job of its kind ever done on the Tyne. The Dovenden, now owned by Messrs. McAllum and Co., is having extra decks constructed, and also a new wooden deck about nine feet below the main deck in Nos. 1, 2 and 3 holds. The old cargo doors at the side of the ship have been removed and six large openings have been made, while six special watertight doors are being fitted.

These doors will open on a level with the upper deck, and in the hatchways steel frame elevators of the trellis type are being installed. Two portable elevators are also being provided, and to meet the requirements of the Factory Act, the lifts will travel from the upper deck to the lower decks, and facilitate the conveyance of motor-cars from the cargo doors down to the storage quarters, and vice versa.

SERVICE

IN THE Ford Motor Company we

emphasize service equally with sales It has always been our belief that a sale does not complete the transaction between us and the buyer, but establishes a new obligation on us to see that his car gives him service We are as much interested in your economical operation of the car as you are in our economical manufacture of it This is only good business on our part. . . . If our car gives service, sales will take care of themselves For that reason we have installed a system of controlled service to take care of all Ford car needs in an economical and improved manner We wish all users of Ford cars to know what they are entitled to in this respect, so that they may readily avail themselves of this service.

Wherever you live, or wherever you go, you will find the Ford dealer prompt and business-like in his work, fair in his charges, and sincerely eager to do a good and thorough job at all times.

8 CYLINDER

The Popular Swing Continues

After 10 years of supremacy, the six cylinder car has given way to the eight, particularly in the moderate price field. This is shown by the 1929 New York Automobile Show where 28 out of 46 makers displayed eights. At last year's New York show, 23 manufacturers exhibited eights.

Figures on the number of eight cylinder makes exhibited at the New York Automobile Show since 1920 are of considerable interest in the light of this popular swing to eights. At the 1920 show there were 18 makes of eight cylinder cars on display. In 1927 the number was 22; in 1928, 22; in 1929, 23 and this year 28.

The advance from the higher priced six to the eight has now attained the momentum of the historic shift from fours to sixes ten years ago. In 1914 when the swing started, 54.2 per cent of all makes of American cars were fours. To-day only 4 per cent are fours.

Among the first manufacturers to foresee this trend and switch from the four to the six in response to the public demand for greater and more flexible power, Studebaker again played the role of pioneer and pointed the way to the popular priced eight.

In 1927, Studebaker brought out an eight cylinder car, the President Eight, priced to command mass sales. So successful was this move that it was quickly followed by the introduction of the Commander Eight in January, 1929, and by the Dictator Eight last year.

The year 1929 was featured by instance after instance of growing eight cylinder popularity. Registration figures for the first seven months of the year over the same period in 1928 showed an increase of 84 per cent. In eight cylinder registrations in the United States while sixes in the same price class registered a decline of 18 per cent. In 30 leading cities, registration of eights and sixes for the first eight months of last year showed a substantial gain in every city for eights with a corresponding loss in sixes.

DELI MARU PIRACY

After dealing with the activities of Cheung and Chan in Hong Kong, Mr. Covey said that $11,000 no doubt was paid to the first accused, and he thought that here one might presume that out of that $11,000 he paid a large sum of money to one Chan Wai-ching, the only man, as far as could be made out, who knew how to get in communication with the pirates, where they lived and everything about them.

"Slipped from Hong Kong"
Chan Wai-ching skipped from Hong Kong with it would seem, some of the money. It was then about January 14, and the accused were arrested and the remainder of the money was found either upon their persons or in the house where they lived, and where first accused had his family with him and carried on his business.

From this point it was very easy to gather the arrangements that had been made between the first accused and Chan Wai-ching. Chan Wai-ching no doubt had come to Hong Kong as an agent of the kidnappers or pirates. He had come as a poor man to see how his masters on the hills could enrich themselves; and he had gone away, or should have gone away, with about $2,500, for he left $1,800 with the second accused for safe keeping.

Chan Wai-ching would produce the money to the pirates or kidnappers, would have related what other money there was, and would have told the pirates or kidnappers that upon Hsu's arrival in Hong Kong, the money, less commission, would be paid over to their messenger.

"The Police stepped in and spoilt all chance of Hsu's release."
Trading With Pirates
Mr. Covey then dealt with the law as promulgated in this Colony, namely, Section 4 of the Piracy Ordinance, No. 1 of 1869, and suggested that by the wording it might be inferred that it applied only to trading with any pirate after a piracy had been committed.

After referring to authorities and the Piracy Act in England, Mr. Covey proceeded to deal piecemeal with the wording of Section 4 of the Ordinance. The first four words of the section were: "In any way consults."

Mr. Covey asked if there had been any vestige of evidence that his clients had consulted with any pirate. He maintained that nowhere had there been either direct or indirect evidence to show that they had consulted with any pirates, kidnappers, abductors, or bandits.

The next word was "combine." He asked if it could be shown anywhere throughout the evidence that accused had combined with any single person. He suggested that if there had been any combination at all with any persons, then it was with Cheung King-yuet, Chan Hui-pu, Liu Chow-yun and Chow Man-king. Certainly not with any pirate.

Accused As A Medium
Dealing with his cross-examination of Cheung King-yuet, Mr. Covey said that when he asked him in what capacity he thought first accused was acting, his reply had been: "The object is to ransom Mr. Hsu."

Then the man Chow Man-king, in his cross-examination had said: "My opinion of the first accused is as a medium. The first accused was acting in the interests of Hsu. If the Police had not interfered Hsu would be free to-day through the kindness and help of the first accused."

"I cannot see that there has been any proof of combination in this case," said Mr. Covey.
Dealing with the word "confederate," Mr. Covey read the definition of that word in Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, and said that neither "collusion" nor "conjunction" would seem to apply to the case, because, as he had already said, there had been absolutely no proof of conspiracy.

Then he came to the word "correspond" and said that he was taking it to have and carry the ordinary meaning in English.

Where, he asked, had the evidence proved other than that Liu Chow-yun wrote the letters and that Cheung King-yuet signed them? The envelopes, too, were addressed by Cheung and handed to first accused and he was paid a messenger's fee, no doubt, to convey the letters to the pirates' agent. Both Cheung and Chow Man-king had agreed on that point.

No Proof of Correspondence
So they now find that first accused never did correspond with pirates or with anyone to enable information to get to Shanghai. There had been no proof of any correspondence at all—except from the Shanghai people. Certainly not from either of the accused.

Next, Mr. Covey dealt with the words: "corresponds with any pirate knowing him to be guilty of piracy." He maintained that there had been not one word to prove that the accused knew anything concerning pirates. His clients' whole dealings had been with the four men they had heard so much about, and in that regard he (Mr. Covey) had put questions in cross-examination of Chow Man-king which drew from him a denial that he was a pirate or that he had ever thought of enriching himself with a bullet or dollars. He also gave the opinion that the other three men, Cheung, Chan and Liu were not pirates.

Mr. Covey then submitted that the prosecution had completely failed to make out any case against either of the two accused, even if they were to suppose that section 4 of Ordinance No. 1, of 1869 included in it the word "ransom" and made it an offence.

Definition of "Ransom"
He read the definition of "ransom" in the Encyclopedia of the Laws of England, and said that under that description it would be noted that the Crown granted a ransom of particular offenders to private persons. He thought that after reading that description they could safely say that there is no law that a man, woman or child shall not be ransomed.

Here Mr. Covey made reference to the efforts made by the Rev. Forbes Tochen, who succeeded in securing the ransom of Capt. Laylor of the a.s. Hsien Tien, in December 1927. For that service Mr. Tochen was awarded the C.B.E. in January 1928.
He (Mr. Covey) would not go so far as to say that either of his clients should have received or been recommended for any such decoration, but he would say that neither should have been charged and made to suffer six weeks' imprisonment.

If the Police in 1928 had considered that the wording of the Ordinance did in truth apply to ransoming, then Mr. Tochen should have been made an example of, for he obviously was in direct communication with pirates, but he got the C.B.E.!

Mr. Covey also criticised the other charges against the accused, and pointed out that what Cheung King-yuet said in answer to his attempt to find out as to whether first accused had used any threats to him, was that the only reference to Hsu's health or treatment was in Hsu's own letter.

Then, the witness Chow Man-king, similarly questioned, said that when he and first accused talked about Hsu, first accused said: "I think Hsu is quite safe. If the matter can be settled earlier he need not suffer, nor will he be in danger." So where was the proof of threatening?

No Evidence of Criminality
In conclusion, Mr. Covey submitted that there had been no evidence whatever of criminality, or intention to commit a crime on the part of the first accused.

With regard to second accused, he submitted that there had been absolutely no evidence whatever to prove him in any way guilty of even attempting to ransom Hsu, or of any criminal act or intention. The only evidence against him had been of $900 being found inside each boat that he was wearing at the time of his arrest. "A very nice place, too, to hide your wealth!"

Mr. Covey asked for the dismissal of both accused, saying that he felt assured that the Attorney-General would, if a commitment were made, enter a nolle prosequi, or failing that, the Judge would not permit such a case to go before a Jury, and that if he did, a Jury would not convict.

The Case of Hsu
Finally, Mr. Covey proposed that the money in the hands of the Police should be paid to trustees, other than the Police, for the respective parties from whom they were taken; to use their utmost endeavours to obtain the release of Hsu.

In this regard he would say that he had consulted first accused and asked if in his opinion it

CRISIS IN CHINA

Plenary Meeting Decides to Subjugate Yen

COUNTRY THREATENED

Canton, Last Night.

In the recent telegram sent by the Kwangtung Provincial Council to the Secretariat of the 3rd Plenary meeting to be held to-day at the Capital, the following points were emphasised, concerning the present crisis on which all eyes of the country are fixed:—
"That revolution and counter-revolution cannot exist simultaneously; that there is a great difference between unification and sphere of occupation; that militarists whose actions are in opposition to the interests of the revolutionary cause will surely perish; and that those intending to wreck the country's unification will be defeated in the end;—these are imperishable facts that we must admit in checking up the past.

Take, for instance, Yuan Shi-kai, the noted militarist of the north, who contemplated an empire for China. What was the ensuing result of the unscrupulous action? Take the recent case of Feng Yu-shiang and Tang Song-chi. They have both received their punishment for their open disregard and revolt against the Government.

Reactionary Influence

And now Yen Shi-san, on whom the great responsibility of the country and party has been laid, is now conspiring against the Government, thereby prolonging the very existence of the Party. In this crisis, the outcome of the country, we venture to submit the following for your consideration:—
1. "That Yen Shi-san, who is proven to conspire against the party and country, be deprived of his Kuomintang membership, and a punitive army sent for his subjugation."

2. "That party discipline be carried out with unflinching perseverance."

3. "That with regard to all the party members, the highest party authority be employed by the Central Government in putting into execution the constructive policy of the party and the Three Principles of the people."—Canton News Agency.
